PUBLISHED BY THE

KALAMAZOO COLLEGE

EXPLANATION

TO THOSE who may regard the title of this book with curiosity and wonder what special significance it possesses, the following explanation may be of interest.

¶ The name of Kalamazoo is of Indian origin, and its etymology, according to several authorities, is Kee-Kalamazoo, it boils like a pot, or the boiling pot. This appellation was probably derived from the numerous small, boiling eddies on the surface of the river now bearing the name.

¶ There is, however, an Indian tradition that accounts for the name in a different manner. This legend relates that many moons ago, in an Indian village on Toland's Prairie, a wager was made that a certain red skinned native could not run to a specified spot on the river's bank and return to the place from which he started before the water, then boiling in a pot over the campfire, should have boiled away. The race was run, with what result we do not know; and the beautiful river eventually came to be known by the name of Kalamazoo, where the river boils in the pot, although the name was at first used to designate only a small part of the stream.

DEAN WILLIAMS

DEDICATION

¶ To Clarke Benedict Williams, Doctor of Science, Olney Professor of Mathematics and Dean of Men in Kalamazoo College, whose quarter century of service in this institution has been a telling force in the establishment and maintenance of its standards and ideals, this Book is respectfully and affectionately dedicated.

Mark Lane Worth, M. S.
1893-1920

In Memoriam

Throughout the greater part of his life Mr. Worth was identified with the educational institutions of Kalamazoo. Following graduation from Central High School, he spent two years in Kalamazoo College before entering the University of Michigan, which granted him the degree of Master of Science. Then, taking up the teaching profession, he was soon called back to Central High School, and his removal to the Physics Department of Kalamazoo College was but a further step along a familiar road.

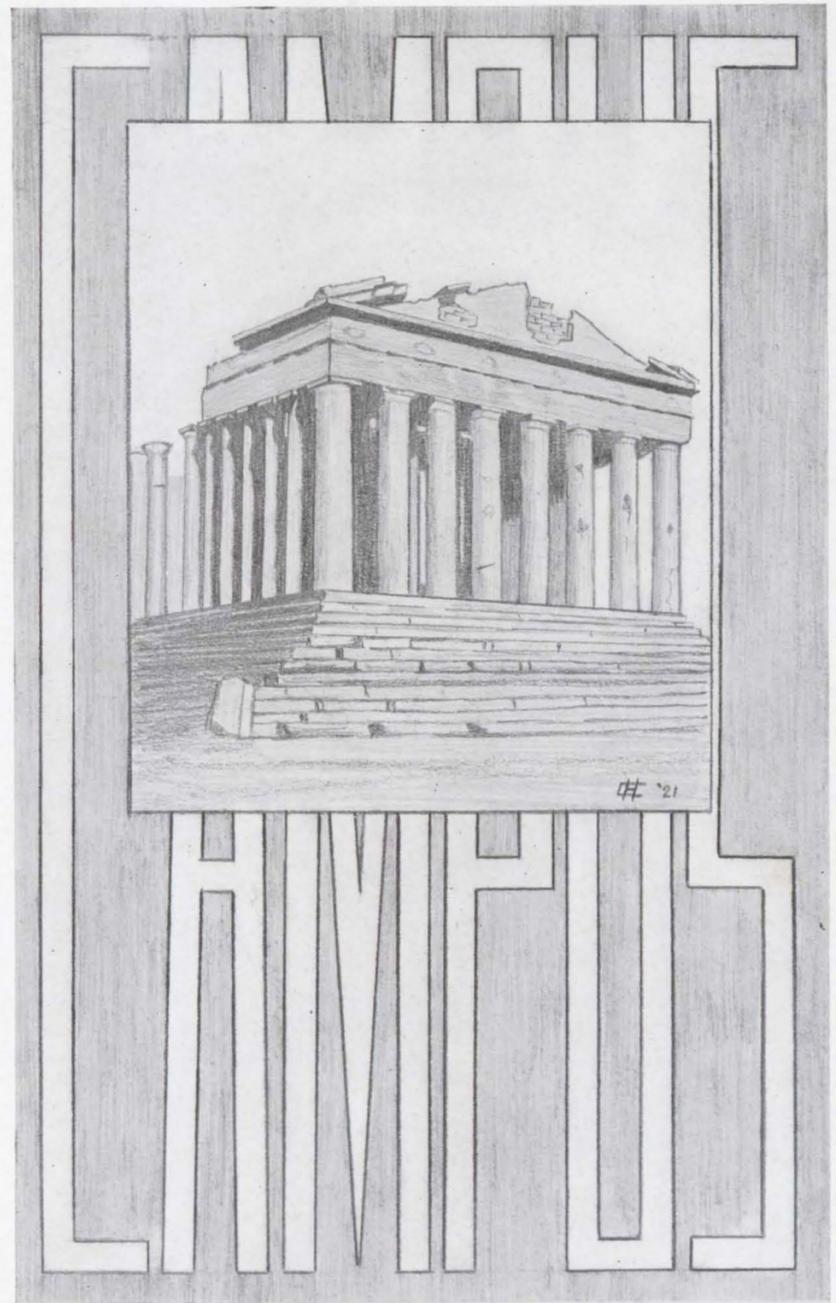

The students of Kalamazoo College knew Mr. Worth in a twofold capacity. To them he was not only an instructor but a friend and advisor. He was intensely interested in what the students were doing, both in and out of the class room. How well we all remember the earnestness with which he went about the re-establishing of tennis as a major sport on the campus, a project in which he succeeded admirably. How well, also, do we remember the never failing regularity with which he attended all athletic contests, and the loyalty with which he supported all branches of student activities.

In paying this last tribute we can but say that Kalamazoo College has indeed lost a friend. No other sentiment adequately expresses the loss we feel.

FOREWORD

IN preparing this Year Book we have kept a twofold purpose constantly before us. First of all we have desired to furnish to those interested in its subject matter a Publication whose reading would give immediate pleasure; but more than that we have sought to construct an Annual whose true worth will be most apparent in the years to come, when college days are memories and all material evidences of them dear to the heart.

¶ With this thought in mind, let us proceed through the following records of a year's activities and achievements.

ATHLETIC FIELD

*The fight 'em spirit on this field holds sway,
And gains the victory in full many a fray.*

MIRROR LAKE

*The robins sing along its verdant brim,
And in its depths fresh Freshies sometimes swim.*

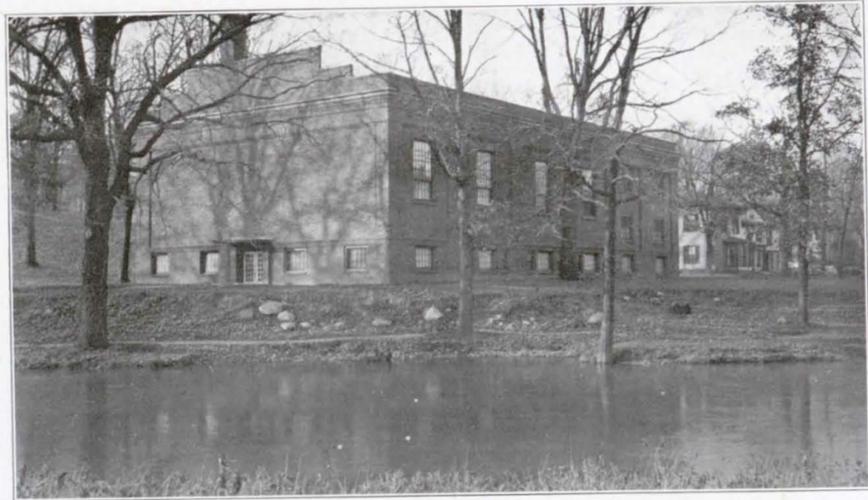

LADIES' HALL

*The center of a keenly felt attraction,
For not a few a terrible distraction.*

BOWEN HALL

*Above the town upon a pleasant hill,
Exceeding small doth grind this knowledge mill.*

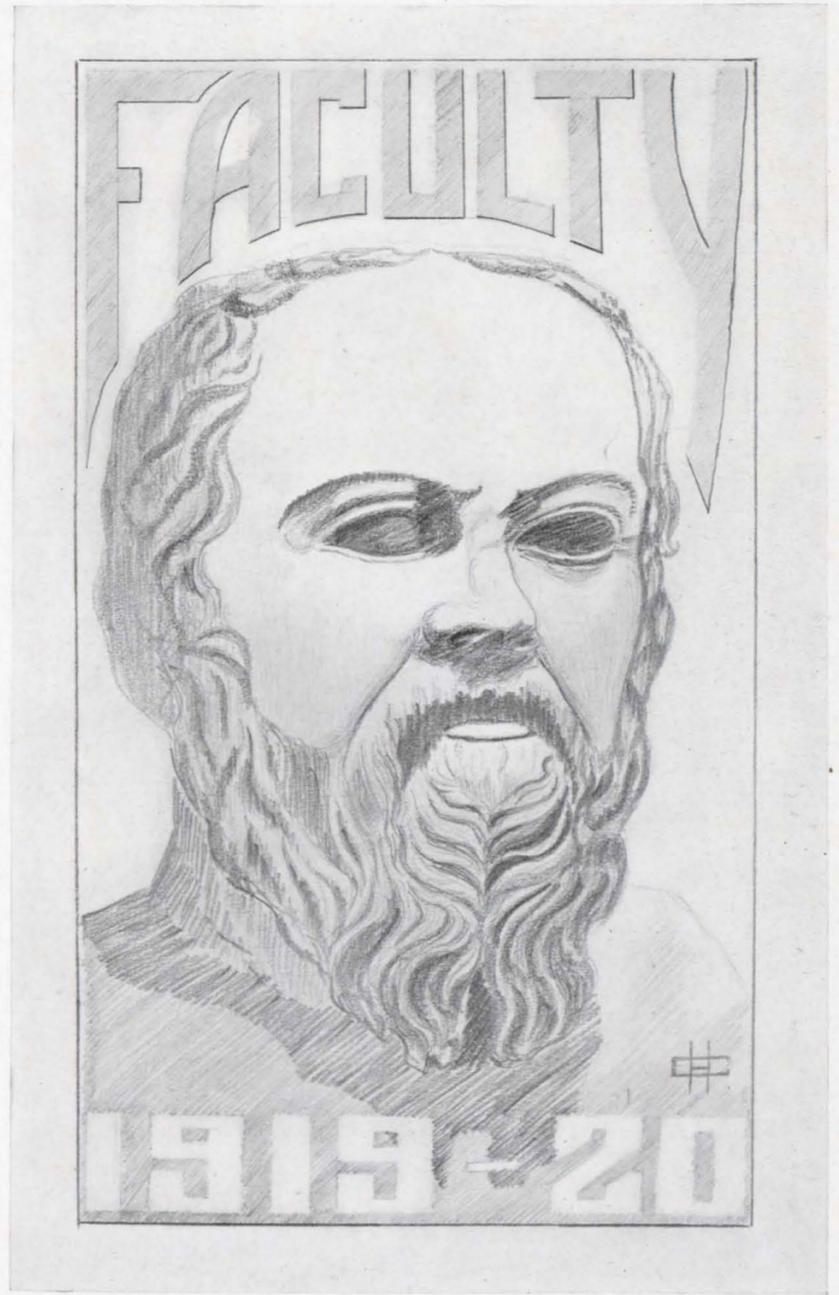

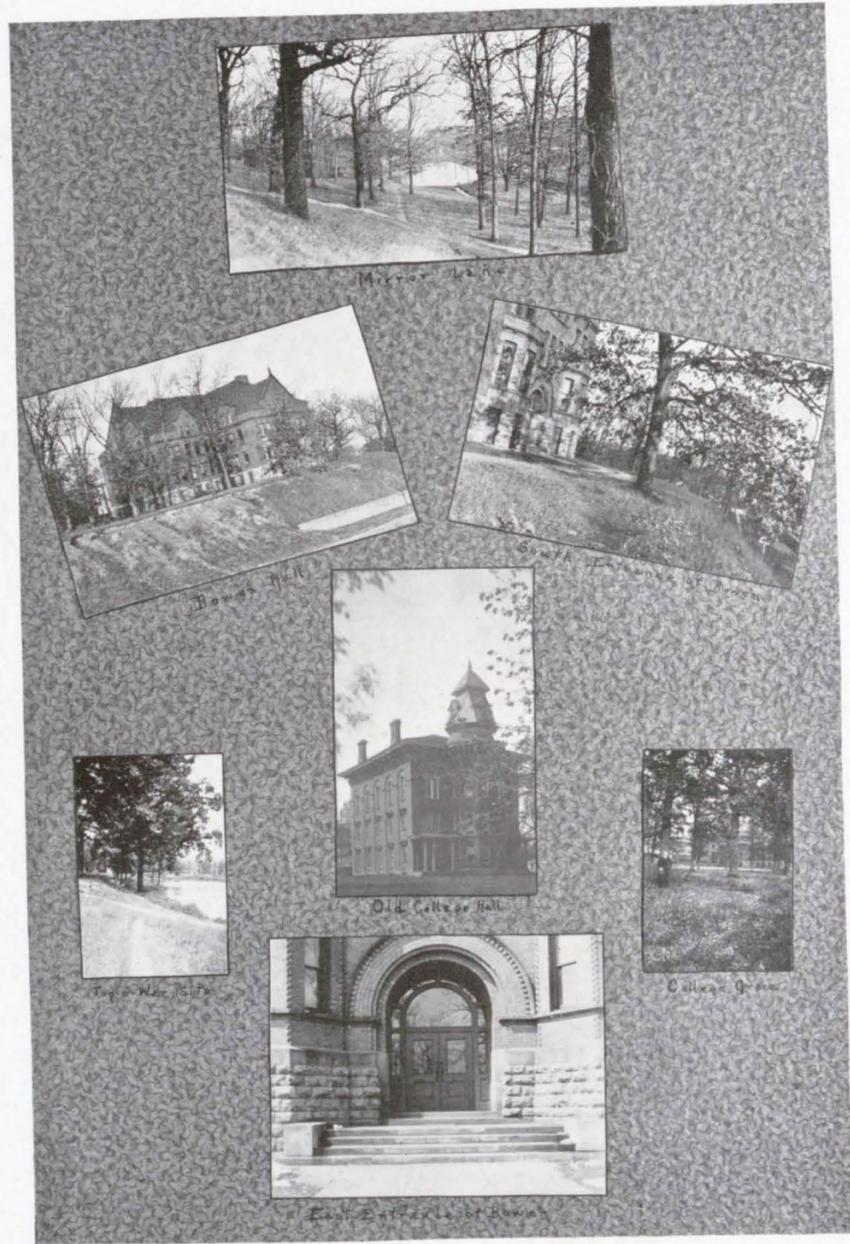

GYMNASIUM

*Without the gym quite calm and peaceful looks,
But covers tell you little about books.*

MEN'S DORMITORY

*There is a sound of revelry by night,
Dull care, it seems, is being put to flight.*

ORATORY

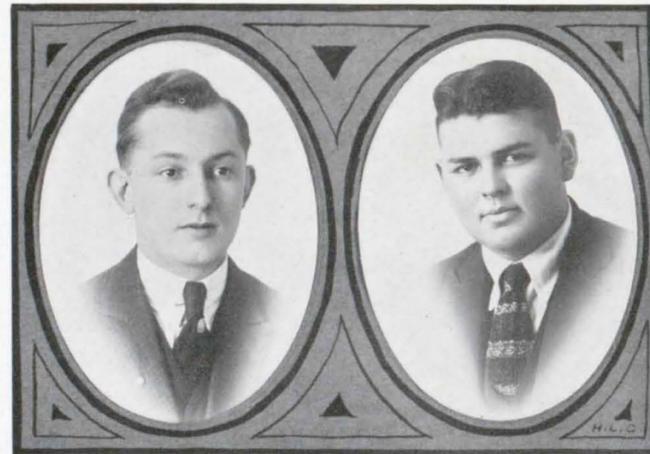

¶ Interest in oratory ran high this year, as the loyal support given to our contestants in the state contest indicates.

¶ Kalamazoo College chose Marion Graybiel and Harry Carpenter to represent her in the state meet, held at Adrian March 12, and sponsored by the Michigan Oratorical League. This contest claims a great deal of inter-collegiate attention throughout Michigan, and Kalamazoo takes pride in the knowledge that she sent the largest out-of-town delegation to Adrian. The enthusiasm displayed by the representation under the orange and black banners was well warranted, for Miss Graybiel won third with her oration, "The Potter's Wheel", and Mr. Carpenter won second with "Where There is no Vision".

HARRY CARPENTER

JOE SCHENSUL

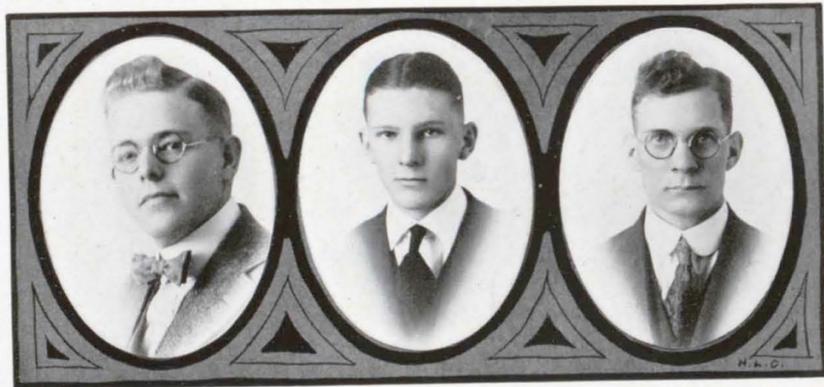

LESTER GRAYBIEL

THE WESTERN TRIP

¶ Kalamazoo College was well represented at the national conference of Pi Kappa Delta, the national honorary oratorical and debating fraternity, which was held March 31-April 1, at Morningside College, Sioux City, Iowa. Joe G. Schensul and Lester Graybiel, debaters, Harry Carpenter, orator, Prof. Joseph Foth, and Prof. Milton Simpson, coach of Oratory and Debate, all made the trip, the first three being charter members of the Michigan Alpha (Kalamazoo) chapter of the fraternity.

¶ The debating team met Mt. Pleasant College, Mt. Pleasant, Ia., en route, and Morningside College, Sioux City, Ia., at the convention. Mr. Carpenter upheld Kalamazoo in the national inter-collegiate oratorical contest. Prof. Foth was chosen national historian of Pi Kappa Delta.

¶ Although Kalamazoo failed to win any platform victories, it is not to be supposed that she regards the trip as fruitless. There is ample proof of an increased interest in forensics here, and this speaks well for success in the contests that are to come.

HAROLD ALLEN

MARSTON BALCH

HAROLD HAWLEY
Manager of Oratory and Debate

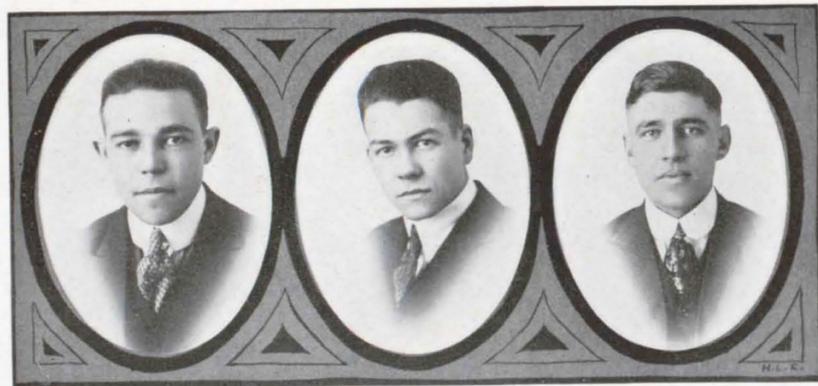

DENISON DEBATE

¶ On April 30 Kalamazoo College engaged in a dual debate with Denison University, the subject being, "Resolved, that it would be Wise for the United States Congress to provide for a Commission with Power to Price and Distribute any Article of Food concerning which, in their Judgment, there is Profiteering."

¶ The negative team, which went to Denison, was made up of Harold Allen, Marston Balch and Harold Hawley. The affirmative team, which remained here, was composed of Bennie Manley, Martin Larson and Charles Brake.

¶ Although both teams met defeat, the affirmative by a unanimous vote of the judges, and the negative by a vote of two to one, the Denison men certainly realized they had been in an argument, with opponents to whom their respect was due.

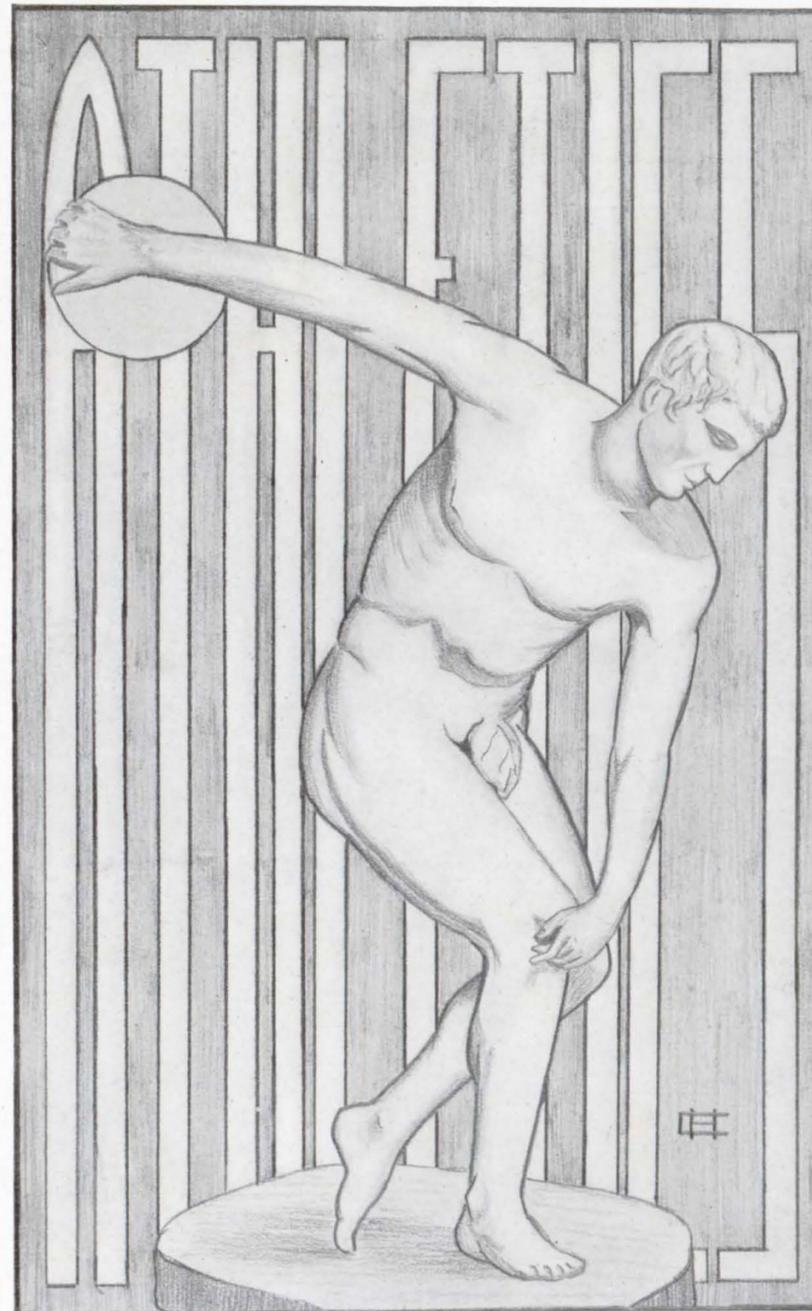

¶ This is the first year that Kalamazoo College has debated Institutions outside the state, and it is interesting to note that, simultaneously with her western trip, she has invaded the East as well. This shows a decided awakening of the forensic spirit, and is but an indication of what is to come.

BENNIE MANLEY

CHARLES BRAKE

OUR COACH

¶ Ralph H. Young, physical director and coach of Kalamazoo College athletics, holds a high place in the esteem of every student. By his untiring efforts, his superior qualities of leadership, and his remarkable ability in coaching all branches of athletics, he has repeatedly produced athletic machines which have won the admiration of all who stand for clean, worthy sportsmanship, and he has done much in giving Kalamazoo an enviable name among Western colleges. During his four years here his teams have won eight M. I. A. A. championships, and have tied for another, out of a possible ten. There is no more versatile and capable mentor in the West than our own Coach Young.

KALAMAZOO COLLEGE ATHLETICS

¶ There is no feature of Kalamazoo College which does more to bind all students and faculty together, and to inspire them with mutual interest than athletics. Greater enthusiasm and more intense college spirit is hard to find than that which prevails on the Orange and Black gridiron, court, diamond and track. It is for these reasons that inter-collegiate athletics are given their proper and deserved place in our college life.

¶ Few colleges of equal size have an athletic record which can compare with that of Kalamazoo. Not only do her teams meet competitors in the M. I. A. A., in which she has captured nearly every championship during the last few years, but representatives of Old Kazoo invade larger institutions, such as Michigan Agricultural College, Valparaiso University, University of Michigan, Notre Dame University, and Washington and Jefferson University. And it is only because of the good showing made by Kazoo against these teams that she is able to retain them on her schedule.

¶ With this enviable record it is not to be wondered that athletes place such an esteemed value upon the coveted "K", for "K" signifies honor, merit, and true Kalamazoo College spirit.

CROSS COUNTRY, 1919

¶ The fall of 1919 saw Kalamazoo College represented in an entirely new branch of sport—cross country running. The first contest was the inter-collegiate meet held at East Lansing. Here Kalamazoo's one entry, Harold Wilcox, finished ahead of the field, defeating men from University of Michigan, M. A. C., Hope College, Albion College and other institutions of like calibre.

¶ Again at Thanksgiving time, Wilcox finished first in the cross country run held by the Grand Rapids Y. M. C. A., while Larson, the other Kalamazoo man, finished in fifth place.

¶ Coach Young wants a number of men out for the cross country events next fall, and plans to enter a cross country team whenever possible.

TENNIS, 1919

¶ As soon as weather conditions permitted, Coach Mark Worth started the annual tennis tournament to decide the championship of the College. The tournament was played off with lots of "pep", with victories for the following contestants:

MEN'S SINGLES Paul Staake	WOMEN'S SINGLES Grace Petertyl
MEN'S DOUBLES Northrup Read, Paul Staake	WOMEN'S DOUBLES Emogen Cain, Grace Petertyl

¶ Although the girls were eliminated here in the series with Albion they played a consistent game and showed that they would be contenders in 1920.

¶ The men worked themselves up to the finals in the series at Albion, and Staake was only defeated by a single game. Read and Staake, whose practice was almost a negligible quantity owing to the interference of baseball, finished second in the M. I. A. A. race.

¶ One of the notable events of the season was the winning of the men's doubles match at East Lansing, when Read and Pinel eliminated the various college teams of the state.

¶ Tennis "K's" were awarded to Read, Staake, Pinel; and "R's" to Petertyl, Tuttle, Cain.

TRACK, 1919

¶ Track and field athletics are now receiving more attention at Kalamazoo than ever before. This is shown by the record made by our 1919 team, which was the fastest and most versatile that has ever represented the institution. Eight different members of this team contributed to the college cinder path and field records, each setting a single mark.

¶ In the first trial of the season, at the inter-collegiate meet at East Lansing, in which seven teams competed, Kalamazoo was headed only by M. A. C. The Farmers secured 57 points while the total of the Orange and Black was 30.

¶ On June 6 and 7 the annual M. I. A. A. meet was held at Albion, at which Kalamazoo had little difficulty in winning first honors. The results were: Kalamazoo 57½, Albion 41, Alma 30½, Hillsdale 6. Though the score of Kalamazoo was large, yet no man of the squad won more than ten points, which shows that the team was very well balanced. Many of the veterans of this team are still with us and will undoubtedly give a good account of themselves this Spring.

BASEBALL, 1919

¶ When, at the start of the season a record squad, including more than a dozen "K" men, reported for practice, it became apparent that Kalamazoo College would again make a strong bid for the championship; and the team lived up to this prediction by bringing home the M. I. A. A. banner after a long and successful season.

¶ Kalamazoo lost but one M. I. A. A. game, and that was to Alma on the latter's diamond. This was more than made up by a decisive defeat of Alma here, and by the defeat of M. A. C. 'varsity at East Lansing.

¶ The field day championship was not decided. Kalamazoo won the first game from Hillsdale, but Alma and Albion were rained off twice; hence, no award was made.

FOOTBALL, 1919

¶ Kalamazoo won the 1919 football championship of the M. I. A. A. because it had easily the best team in the association.

¶ The two big features of the season were the splendid showing made by Kalamazoo against Notre Dame 'varsity, one of the strongest elevens in the west, and the game with Albion College here. In the former both teams made the same number of first downs and made about the same number of yards. Both went scoreless in the first three quarters, and only in the last period was Notre Dame able to put across two touchdowns. The contest with Albion was noteworthy for the exhibition of spirit by the student body whose members staged two grand marches through the city, introduced Albion's coffin and goat between halves, and attended the Regent theatre in a body in the evening, after an old-time celebration around a bonfire on the campus. More than that, however, the game was noteworthy for the brand of football put up by the Kalamazoo team. Albion was unable to cross the Orange and Black goal line, making its only score on a safety.

BASKETBALL, 1920

¶ The basketball season was a peculiar one for Kalamazoo. No Orange and Black quintet ever faced a harder schedule; and, considering the long list of incapacities on the part of the players, no team ever put up a gamer, more characteristic Kalamazoo fight. How well the season's record testifies to this! Seven losses in nine games, then ten consecutive wins, including two over Valparaiso, one over Hope, and a glorious victory over Hillsdale with the M. I. A. A. flag at stake.

¶ The M. I. A. A. championship in basketball, which has not left Kalamazoo for six years, remains with us again, although we are compelled to share it with Hillsdale. The two leading teams each won seven games and lost one. Alma, Albion, and Adrian each won two and lost six.

¶ Three men of the 'varsity club, Capt. Wattles, Strome and Hoekstra, have played their last game for their Alma Mater. These men will be greatly missed next year. However, with Capt.-elect McKay, the finds of the present season, Vroeg and Lambke, and several fast reserve men back, it is certain that a strong team will represent Kalamazoo next season

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

¶ The Y. M. C. A. has never been more active than during the present year. Meetings have been held regularly, at which many prominent leaders of the city have spoken. In this way much has been done to develop in the college active Christian leaders, which is the primary object of the "Y" on the campus.

¶ One of many noteworthy achievements of the organization, in this instance working in conjunction with the Y. W. C. A., was the publication and distribution of a students' handbook among the new comers at the beginning of the college year.

¶ An active Bible study class, conducted by student leaders, is another example of the Association's work.

YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

¶ The Y. W. C. A. works on the principle that if it is worth while to have an Association on the campus, it is worth while to boost it. Consequently the Association continues to forge ahead both in increased membership and in improved programs.

¶ At the Tuesday afternoon meetings visiting speakers and student leaders portray the college girls' needs, and the ideals of an open minded co-ed. From time to time social problems are discussed, and special musical numbers or other features furnish variety.

¶ Bible study classes and Eight Weeks club training classes are formed under the auspices of the Association, and each year the World Fellowship committee stages the big co-ed banquet, at which money is raised for our sister college at Gingling, China.

¶ The Student Volunteer movement was inaugurated in 1885, but the local band was not organized until about 1886.

¶ The expression of a world-wide vision is the purpose of those students who join the movement. Although fields of service are everywhere apparent, especial interest is directed to foreign lands, and it is the needs of these lands that the Student Volunteers try to meet by cultivating Christian character that will make their lives of the greatest service to Christ.

¶ The weekly meetings of the group are given over to prayer, to the study of various religions, and to discussions and reports on current events from the mission fields. Throughout the year special meetings are held for the purpose of hearing different Student Volunteer secretaries and missionaries.

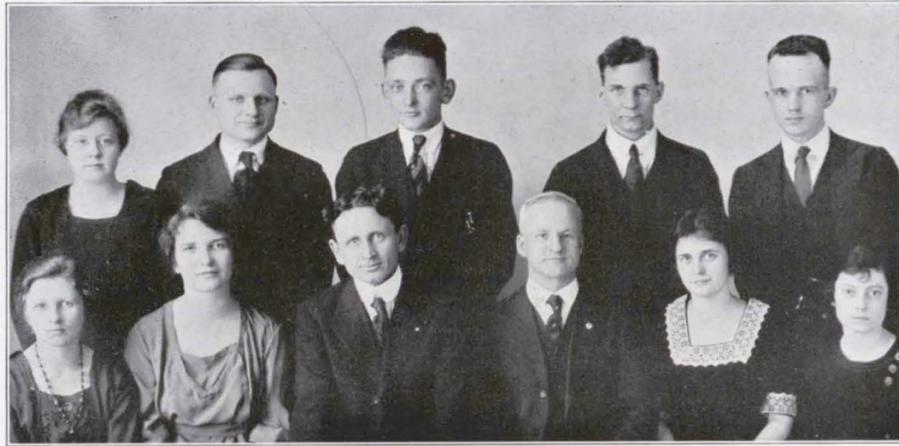

¶ Some conception of the extent of the local work may be gained from the fact that Kalamazoo College has been represented in seven different lands by 25 missionaries. Those students who attended the Student Volunteer convention at Des Moines during the Christmas holidays came to realize the meaning and scope of the movement.

CO-OPERATIVE STORE

¶ Two years ago the student body took over the college store, which had previously been operated by individuals, and made it a co-operative institution. During these two years the store has earned its purchase price, and is now on a non-profit, co-operative basis.

¶ Not only have prices been reduced, but the stock has been greatly enlarged, and the store is giving the students a service in keeping with demands made upon it.

Mlle. DIETZ

OUR FRENCH GIRLS

¶ In 1919 Kalamazoo College was one of a number of American colleges and universities to offer scholarships to French women, for the purpose of aiding in the work of reconstruction so urgent in France.

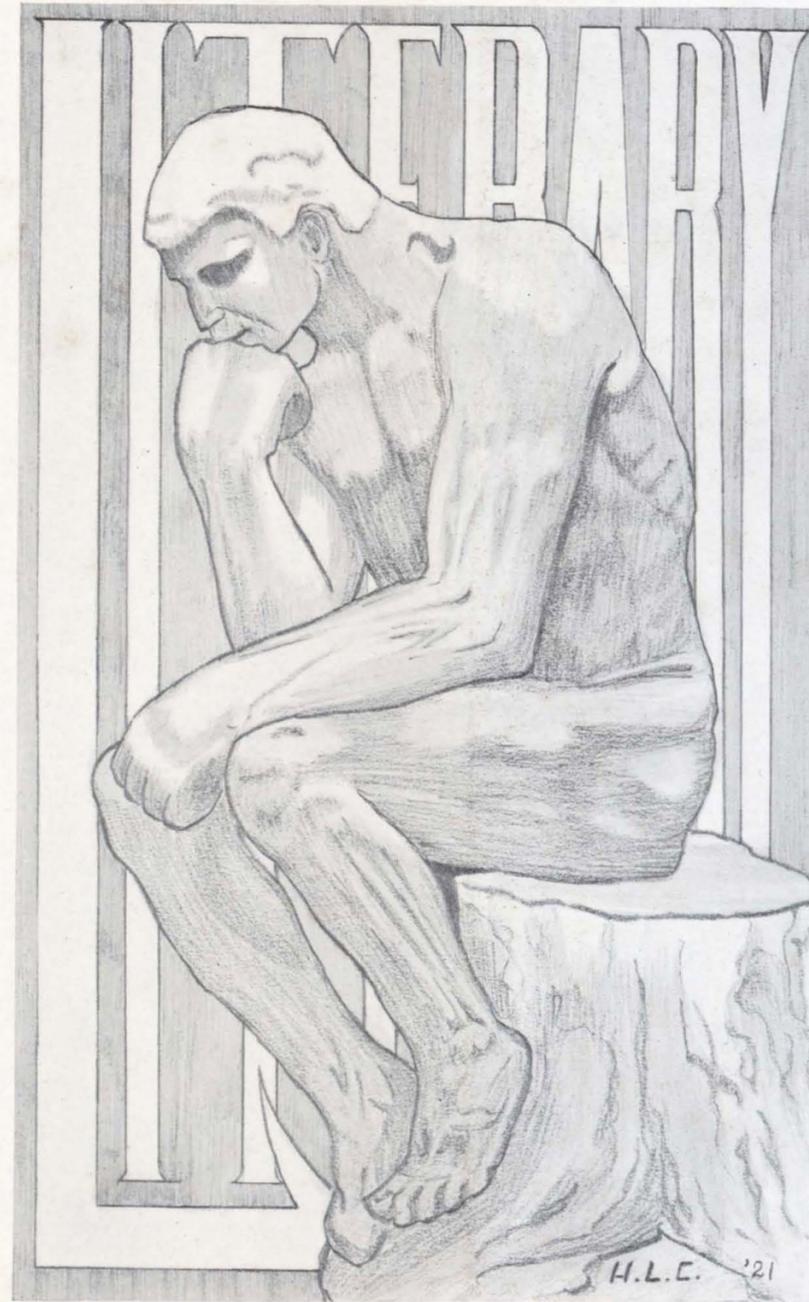

¶ Through the co-operation of the Association of American Colleges and the French government Mlle. Lucie Dietz of Bordeaux and Mlle. Marthe Colin of Toule secured the Kalamazoo College scholarships.

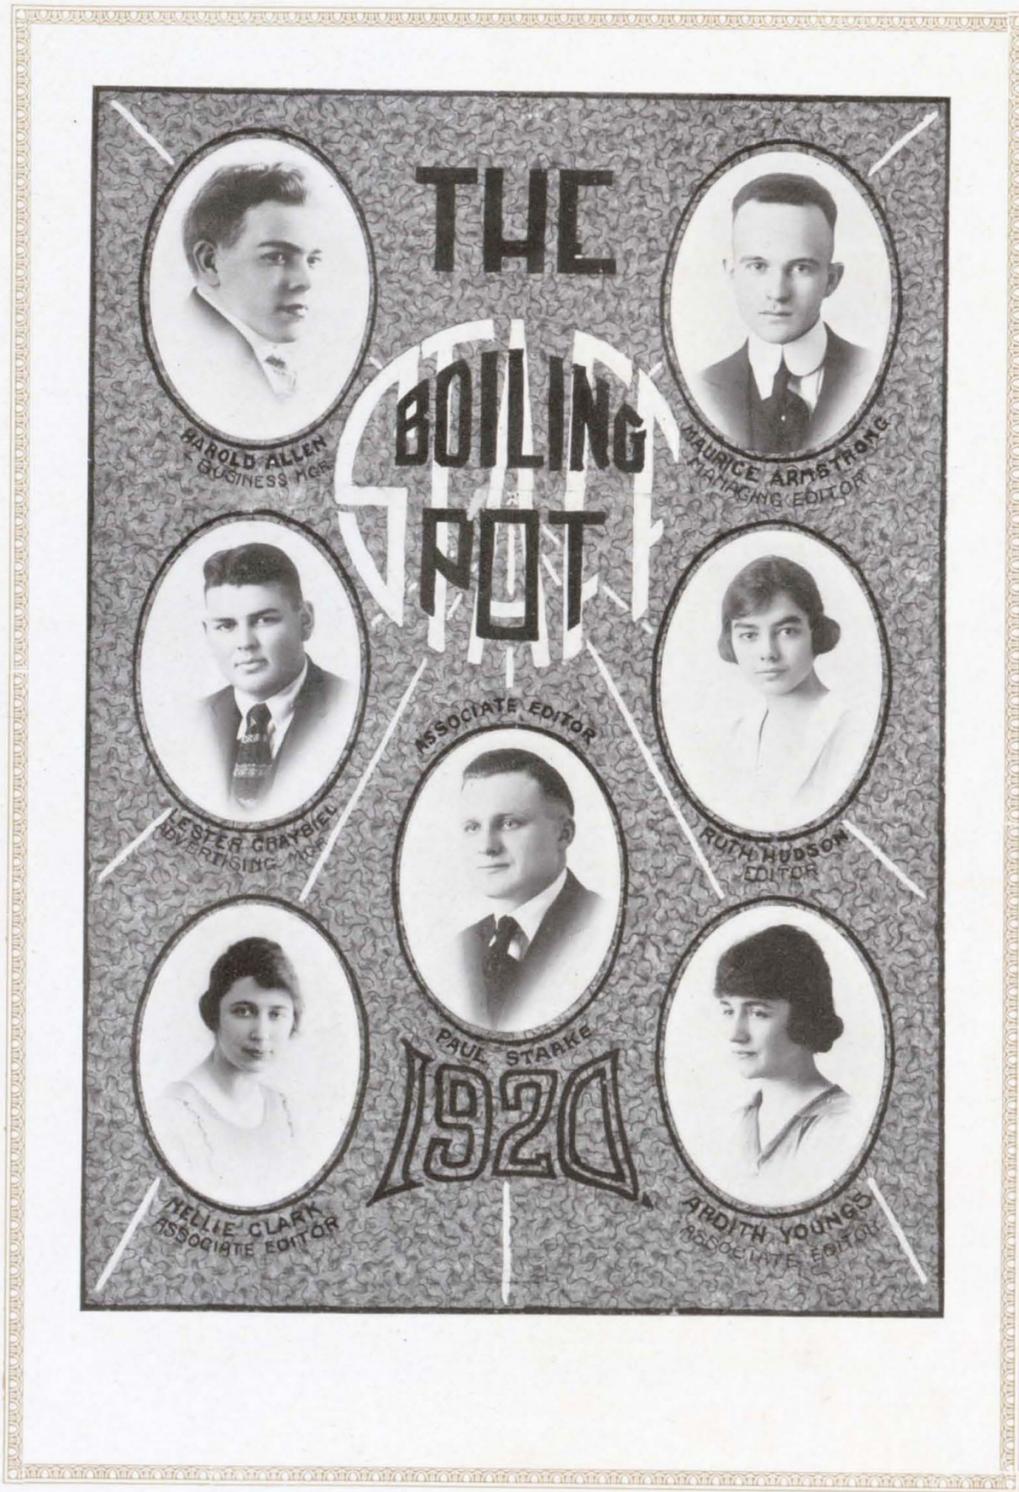

¶ Before coming to America Mlle. Colin attended the College de Toul, Academie de Nancy, and received her Diplome de Fin d'Etudes Secondaires in 1916. Mlle. Dietz studied at the Universite de Bordeaux and received her Diplome de Fin d'Etudes Secondaires in 1917, Baccalauriat Sciences Langues in 1918, and Baccalauriat Philosophie in 1919.

¶ The student body of Kalamazoo College has found this contact with modern French womanhood truly delightful. It is only to be regretted that Mlle. Colin and Mlle. Dietz will not be with us another year.

Mlle. COLIN

IN OLD KENTUCKY

(Winner of the Eurodelphian Short Story Contest)

WE were sitting around the stove in the back part of Mayer's grocery one night when the thermometer was standing at 14 below, and a number of the older men had been telling stories of the days gone by. When Wes Herman rolled his cud of tobacco back into the corner of his mouth, we knew we were about to hear from him. It was almost closing time, but we were never very particular about locking the door at any stated minute, so we waited to hear from Wes, not the oldest of the group, but a man who had seen much of the world and had a big stock of stories from his actual experience that were well worth listening to. There were no customers in the store at the time and there were not likely to be any more on a night like that, so Ed, the other clerk who was on duty with me that night, and I, pulled our chairs a little closer to the stove, and Wes began:

"About twenty years ago, I was down in Kentucky,—just there to see something of the country and find out what kind of people lived there. You know the stories they used to tell about the family feuds of the mountain folk. Well, I spent almost two years there and part of that time I was running a little hardware store in a village called Elliston. It was just a little place, about half as big as this town, and most of the business we storekeepers did was with the people from the hills. So, you see, I had a pretty good opportunity to get acquainted with some of them.

"One of the families that I came to know was named Keller,—mountaineers for six generations that they knew of and there may have been more. It was not long before I found out about the feud that existed between the Kellers and another family that lived in another direction from town,—people named Watson. I didn't know them so well, but I did have enough to do with them to make up my mind they were mighty fine folks. I never found out what the cause of the feud was,—probably the younger members of the family couldn't have told. But a feud there was and none of us ever spoke of one family in the presence of any member of the other. There hadn't been any active trouble for some time, till one day something happened, I don't know what, and open war was on. We didn't see much of the fighting, although reports of it came to us, brought by the other mountaineers of the neighborhood. Then one day, one of the younger Watsons, a boy named Ralph, came to work in the bank. We all liked him,—the bank was next door to the hardware store and he and I got to be pretty friendly. He never said anything to me directly about the feud, but he gave me the impression that he did not share the family hostility toward his neighbors. He managed to avoid the Kellers whenever they came to town and everything seemed to be all right as far as he was concerned. And so things went on for several months. Ralph was given more and more responsibility and of course, with the few clerks they had in the little bank, this meant that he was trusted a great deal. Well,—now this is where the story really begins,—one night I was locking up the store rather later than usual, when I saw a dim light in the back part of the bank. I looked more closely and saw that Ralph was in there working on the books. I went on home and thought no more of it, till next morning a short time after the bank opened, word was brought in that there was a shortage of several thousand dollars in cash from the vaults of the bank. The books seemed to balance perfectly, showing it was not merely an error. In a little bank such as that was, it doesn't take very long to go over the whole day's records (they had balanced the books the day before), and it was soon found that the shortage was in the vault rather than on the books. In fact, one of the clerks declared that he himself had put between three and four thousand dollars in a box in a certain part of the vault and this box could not be found. When Ralph arrived about noon,—it was his forenoon off,—he realized his position at once: it was known that he was going to work late the night before, tho of course no one knew how late, but he went at once to the president, Mr. Churchill, and told him he had been in the bank till almost midnight, correcting an error, and that he had locked everything carefully when he left. Now, here was the situation,—"the old man paused reflectively for a moment, as if going back, in his mind, over the intervening years,—" only two men had the combination to that vault, Ralph Watson and the cashier. Both were trusted implicitly,—Reigle the cashier had been in that bank for twenty years, and he could never have stolen anything of the kind any more than he could have robbed the treasury of the church where he was deacon. And Ralph seemed to be just as far from being capable of such a deed as the deacon. It was a mystery that no one seemed able to throw any light on. The bank arranged some way to make up the shortage, and the town had stopped talking about it,—Mr. Churchill tried to keep the matter as quiet as he could,—until about a week later the real blow came. Going over his mail one morning, the president found, inside a big envelope without any identification marks on it, a letter addressed to Ralph Watson. The outer envelope was post marked Elliston, while the inner one had apparently come to Elliston, to Ralph, from Louisville. It had been opened and was soiled a little as if the owner had carried it for some time. Without looking inside, Mr. Churchill called Ralph into his private office, handed him the letter, and said:

"I don't know why this letter was sent to me. It is evident that it belongs to you, so I'll let you have it."

"Why, yes," exclaimed Ralph, "that is a letter I got from a friend of mine in Louisville. Here is the name on the envelope: Obie Swanson."

"He opened the letter to reassure himself,—at the same time wondering how it had gotten out of his possession and why it should have been sent to the bank president. At the first glance he knew it was not the letter he had supposed, although a second glance at the envelope satisfied him that that, at least, was genuine. He started to read the contents, a puzzled expression on his face, followed by a look of bitter anger.

"Read that, sir! Some one is trying to incriminate me by sending you that forged letter. Swanson never wrote that."

"Churchill took the letter. It was addressed to Ralph Watson, and was a sort of informal receipt for $3,500, which the writer promised to invest 'according to the arrangement.' There was no signature in script, just the typewritten name, 'Obie Swanson.'

"The banker rose, put his hand on the young man's shoulder and said:

"Don't worry about that letter. Even if I didn't know you as well as I do, a piece of work as crude as that wouldn't have much influence on me. But sit down,—he pointed to a chair (and took one himself.) "This thing doesn't end when I say that it doesn't change your position here. We are still $3,500 short and this is the best clew we have so far. As you know we have had nothing, almost, to work on."

"Yes, I know only too well. I've seen the glances people have been throwing at me, ever since the thing happened. Mr. Churchill, I'd give anything in the world to have this thing cleared up."

"I have a plan, which I think can be made to work, if you,—no, it is too much to ask of you. We'll have to think of something else." Churchill got up from his chair and paced the floor.

"I told you I would do anything to help clear up this affair and I mean it," replied Ralph. "What is the plan you had in mind?"

"Well, it's this: The man that sent that letter knows where that money went to, and if we can find him, we will have the key to the whole situation. Evidently, it was someone who hates you bitterly,—do you know of any one like that who could be capable of such a thing as this?"

"No-o, unless—, no, sir, I don't believe I do."

"The banker went on, 'I don't know that this will work, but it is the only thing I can think of now, to bring the rascal to light. Would you be willing to leave town, allowing people to think you were guilty of taking the money and had been found out through this letter? It is a hard thing to ask of you and I won't think any the less of you if you refuse. But I see no other way just now.'

"Ralph hesitated a moment, and then said: 'Yes, if you will write my father and tell him the circumstances, I'll go.'

"That afternoon the story got out that Ralph Watson had been found to be the guilty party in the bank mystery and had skipped out before they could arrest him. We couldn't believe it and I went to the bank myself and told Churchill so. He replied that he never could have believed it either, had not a certain letter fallen into his hands. He showed me the letter.

"I don't believe it," I said.

"But he skipped out the minute he learned that I had this letter," was the reply. "What's the conclusion? But, frankly," he went on, lowering his voice, "I don't believe he's guilty either, but I am just going to keep still about the matter, for I have an idea Ralph has some kind of a plan to solve this thing, and is purposely letting people think as they do. So please don't say anything about it to anyone else."

"So I had to content myself with that, though it made my blood boil to hear people talking about the boy, as they did. I guess it's human nature for folks to believe the worst about a fellow whenever things look bad for him. Of course there were a few who wouldn't believe he was guilty, but this running away was pretty strong evidence against him.

"Now, during all this time the feud between the Watsons and the Kellers was quieting down again. Neither family came to town often these days, so I got only second-hand news of them. Then one day, old Als Keller, the leader of the clan, came into the store. I was alone but he asked me to go into the back room with him where he could talk to me without being disturbed. He was deeply moved by something, and when we sat down, he rested on the very edge of his chair, with his hands on his knees as he talked.

"Herman," he said, "you're a friend of mine, ain't you?"

"Why, certainly, Als, what's the trouble?"

"It ain't easy to tell a man what I'm going to tell you, but I need your help. I've lost a son. No, he ain't dead,—I wish to God he was. I'll begin at the beginning of the story and then I'll tell you how yo'all can help me. When I heard tell that Ralph Watson had skipped out, and just the same as admitted that he'd stole the money, I said it was just what I'd expect of a Watson. Last night my son John come home from a trip over the hills. He hadn't been home for about two weeks. He was half drunk when he got there and twasn't but a little while before he was with the other fellows of the neighborhood, and then he got real drunk. He found out about Watson's leaving and he was mighty pleased. When he come back to the house he was as talkative as a parrot, and half the time he didn't know what he was saying. He said som'ing about Ralph Watson that attracted my attention and I asked him a few questions and 'twasn't long before I had the story out of him: he was the one that took the money from the bank,—he'd stole the combination to the vault, out of Watson's pocket. It wasn't that he wanted the money so much, but he wanted to hurt Watson. It wasn't just the family affair between 'em; there's a girl over the hills that both of 'em want, and John thought he would disgrace the other fellow and have a clear field to himself.—The old man got up from his chair and there was a proud look in his face as he stood there as straight as a sapling on his mountains. 'Herman,' he went on, 'the Watsons have been enemies of ours for three generations, since 'fore I was born, and they're our enemies yet. But, by Heaven, the Kellers don't fight their enemies like snakes in the grass, they fight like men. John Keller ain't no son of mine no more. Don't ask me where he is 'cause I don't know,—but he won't be around these here parts much from now on.' He sank down on his chair again and put his head on his hands. 'A son of mine doin' a thing like that.' Then he straightened up, and said: 'The reason I come to you was because I thought mebber you could help me find Ralph Watson.'

"Have you told Mr. Churchill," I asked him.

"Not yet."

"Then I think the next thing to do is to go to him and tell him just what you have told me. I'll go with you if you want me."

"So we went into the bank and Als repeated the story he had told me. Churchill listened in astonishment.

"And you're here to clear the name of Ralph Watson, one of your sworn enemies, at the expense of that of your own son?"

"I'm here 'cause John Keller done som'ing the Kellers don't do, and I don't know no other way to make things right. What I want to know is, where can I find Watson. I got to find him and o' course, I'll pay you the money John took."

"Churchill stopped and thought a minute and then answered: 'I believe I can find the boy. You come back here day after to-morrow.'

"So two days later, Als came back to the bank, asking me to go in with him again, because he knew me better than he did the banker. When we reached the inner office of the bank, we found Ralph in the room with Churchill, but from the minute we entered, neither Ralph nor Keller noticed any one but each other. Als walked right over to where Ralph was and began without wasting any time:

"Watson," he said, 'you ain't had a square deal from the Kellers, and the Kellers are men enough to come and try to make things right. Will you give me a chance to square things?"

"Keller, I can see what it means to you to say this to me. But things can't be squared between you and me until they are squared between you and my father, too. You have shown that you are a man in coming to me like this; are you man enough to meet my father and drop this quarrel, that neither of you really had anything to do with? He's come to town and is ready to meet you; what do you say?"

"Keller hesitated a minute, looking the younger man squarely in the eye, as trying to read what was going on inside him.

"When you put it up to me like that, there's only one thing I can say: yes. Will you shake?"

"While the two men were shaking hands, Churchill walked to the door and called for Mr. Watson, Ralph's father. The man came in.

"Watson," said Keller, 'your son here has showed me that our quarrel ain't the right thing. Let's call it settled. What do you say?"

"Three days ago," replied Watson, extending his hand, 'I wouldn't have come near here. But I guess the Kellers ain't the kind of people I always thought.'

"There's another thing, Mr. Keller," said Ralph, as the two men were shaking hands, 'they tell me that John has left your home,—to stay. Will you ask him to come back? Quarreling with one of your own family is worse than quarreling with your neighbors.'

"After the way he's treated you, you want him to come back and be friends?" Keller asked in surprise.

"Yes."

"Well, if yo'all can forgive him, I sure can. I'll find him."

"Churchill shook hands with the three men and they left the office. And for the first time in fifty years, a Keller walked by the side of a Watson, as his friend."

THE GARDEN NOOK

(Winner of the Junior Annual Poetry Contest)

*It is only a plain little cottage,
Surrounded by flowers and lawn,
And trees with their wide-spreading branches,
And vines that cover its walls.
And all around the garden
Runs a green secluding hedge;
Which seems to bar from the cottage
The strife of the city beyond.
Here in a nook of the garden
Is a hammock and three wicker chairs,
And oft to this restful haven
From the heat of the summer day
The mother comes with her sewing,
Or reads for a while, or dreams.
A refreshing breeze, cool and gentle,
Is always a visitant here,
Bearing the perfume of roses*

*Intermixed with the humming of bees.
And then as the evening approaches
The husband and children come home,
And there in the nook of the garden
Forget the cares of their toil.
And into their souls comes the quiet
Which nature alone can give,—
That peaceful sense of the presence
Of the God of the Great Out-of-doors.
And oft to this peaceful garden
Come friends who are tired from their work,
Who feel that life is a failure,
That God is far from the world.
And here in the quiet garden
They draw closer again to God,
They feel Him near in the flowers,
In the trees and the song of the birds.*

KALAMAZOO COLLEGE AND THE INTER-CHURCH MOVEMENT

¶ Realizing the intense need of the world for the things of Christ and aware of the unparalleled opportunity of the age, Protestant Christendom is uniting in a comprehensive program for the purpose of making Christianity universal. The Inter-church Movement, entered upon by 30 denominations, includes the raising of $336,777,572. The Northern Baptist Convention, naming its drive the New World Movement, has set $130,000,000 as its goal, practically $31,000,000 of this sum to be used in the interests of education.

¶ As a Baptist institution Kalamazoo College will receive $1,000,000 with which to increase the endowment, raise the salaries of faculty members, and if possible erect additional buildings.

¶ Not only will Kalamazoo College benefit by this direct gift of $1,000,000, but it will greatly appreciate the students' guild house to be erected in connection with the First Baptist Church on its site in the heart of the city at a cost of $30,000.

¶ The conception of a world responsibility and the realization of a pressing need within their own institution have caused the student body of Kalamazoo College to support the New World Movement in every possible way. On May 3 the sum of $12,776.64 had been pledged in the name of the College.

¶ The campaign in Michigan is being directed by a Kalamazoo College alumnus, Rev. Grant M. Hudson, '94, and during the life of the drive Professors E. A. Balch, Milton Simpson, Mark Bailey, L. F. Smith and H. H. Severn spoke many times throughout the state in the interests of the Movement.

¶ Kalamazoo College is proud of those true sons and daughters all over the nation who are devoting themselves wholeheartedly to this tremendous campaign for the extension of Christ's Kingdom.

THE DEADLY PARALLEL

Snatches from a Freshman Gaynorite's Journal

¶ March 29—Started with my baggage, diary, and pocketbook to accompany the Gaynor Club on its annual Spring trip. Eaton Rapids was the first town favored. It's a very pretty little city and I noticed that it brightened up considerably when we arrived. We gave our concert at the church and furnished a great deal of amusement for the audience by looking so different from our pictures that they were kept busy picking out each of us by the pictures on the program. I sang pretty well in all the numbers but several of the other girls made mistakes. Peg seemed to be in rather of a hurry and left the club behind, several times. She had started on the second number before we were through with the first—but we hurried and caught up, and none seemed to notice any mistakes. As this was the first time we had seen the playlet which closed the concert, we were very much entertained by it; and as the girls in the play had told us where the funny parts were supposed to be, we laughed heartily to help them out, for it is so much easier to act when the funny parts are appreciated.

¶ March 30—I got up in time for dinner for I didn't want my hostess to think I am lazy or to establish a bad reputation for the Gaynor Club. In the afternoon, the people at Eaton Rapids were afraid we were going to stay, so they put us in machines and took us to Mason where we performed this evening. In the afternoon we sang for the High School people so as to advertise a bit. We had footlights, tonight, so we had to make ourselves look beautiful. I noticed that some had a hard time of it, but I won't mention any names, for if anyone should read this after my death, they would think I was a gossip. Mugs Cady, Eleanor Curry, and Marian Graybiel were among our audience and they encouraged our

*Diary of a Glee Club

¶ Monday—Everybody at the station bright and early. Spend time before train sticking stickers on luggage. Dunbar misses the train at Grand Rapids. Thompson and Cutting bid their girls good-bye at Grand Rapids and join the club. Arrive at Cedar Springs on time and spend the remainder of the morning playing baseball (Morse stars). All eat dinner together with a Kazoo alumnus. The basket ball team practice all afternoon at the community house. Bill Nelson loses his safety razor.

¶ Tuesday—Dunbar loses his coat, and comes to the station in his shirt sleeves. Everybody reports ham and eggs for breakfast. Arrive in Reed City and are escorted to dwelling places. The gang spend the morning playing pocket billiards and bowling at the community house. Rehearsal in the afternoon. After giving the concert to a packed house, the Glee Club Jazz Orchestra, consisting of R. Cutting, banjo; P. Staake, drums; K. Ring, piano, and W. Dunbar, cornet, was hired to play for a hearers to laugh, and they saw to it that we were clapped back enough to give all our clever encores. It surely helps to have such friends in the audience. Mary Cutting met a fellow whose name was Russell and who seemed much impressed with our young Gaynorite,—as I gathered from the remark he very elatedly made to one of the teachers about his having arranged for a date with the girl with the ingrain stockings. I'm wondering if we are to have a romance develop right here in the Gaynor Club. Time will tell.

¶ March 31—News from the Glee Club began to arrive today, although this seemed to affect but few of the members of our Club. We left for Lansing this morning, by interurban and when the conductor was helping all of us and our baggage on the car, he inquired whether Mason was moving. In Lansing we went up to visit the Governor at the Capital, but he must have been out of the city for we didn't catch any glimpse of him. We didn't have any place to go before supper, so we stayed at the Baptist Church where we were to give our concert, and wrote letters, etc. Ardith spent most of her time studying time tables, as she is the one who orders our trains for us each day. The Baraca fellows gave us a banquet at the church which was very much appreciated as we had been obliged to buy our own dinners and we didn't have much. The concert was quite successful. This is Ruth Hudson's church—I mean, she is a member of it—so the audience asked her to sing, and she won more applause than any of the rest of us. Mary Cutting's acquaintance, Russell, unexpectedly appeared during the concert, again. He's getting to be the main support of the Club—both financially, and in keeping up the morale of one of the members. The Gaynor Club is going to Howell (howl) tomorrow. This is a joke.

dance. The Glee Club terpsichoreans fought bravely to keep up with the local dancers. Webb's interpretive dancing feet-ured.

¶ Wednesday—Burdick and Nelson miss train because Nelson insists on taking his trip bath. A sight seeing expedition through the thriving metropolis of Cadillac furnishes the morning's amusement. Rehearsal at one o'clock. Sing at high school mass meeting and get much praise from "Chuck" Crandall. The Glee's basket ball team, consisting of Cameron and Staake, guards; Ring and Milroy, forwards, and Cutting, center, challenged the fast Cadillac high school basket ball team to a game and surprised everybody, including themselves, by nearly defeating the Northerners in a game full of thrills. The final score was 30 to 26 with Cadillac on the long end. A record-breaking audience greeted the warblers and insisted on the club giving several encores after each number. Everybody stays up all night in order to catch the 2 A. M. train for Harbor Springs. "Corpus" Webb manages to snatch off a few hours' sleep.

morning, Nellie Clark, who carries the canes we use, on her suitcase, almost hooked a man in the hook of a cane. The conductor, who evidently doesn't believe in leap year, marched down the aisle and put the canes under a seat. All the men in the car looked relieved, but I noticed that Nellie seemed rather disappointed. We went to Howell this afternoon. As soon as we got there we raided the postoffice and took from it a great deal of its contents. Then we went riding, had a rehearsal, and—supper. I wasn't very hungry, so I couldn't do justice to the wonderful supper my hostess had prepared. I only ate the things they insisted upon my taking and had—four helpings of potato salad, three slices of meat, six pieces of nut-bread and two rolls, three servings of beans and of fruit-salad, a dish of sauce and two pieces of the yum-i-est cake. I learned that some of the Gaynor Girls had established the reputation, last year, of being heavy eaters and long sleepers and as this made me feel rather ashamed, my appetite was naturally affected.

¶ April 2—We made our exit from Howell by means of a gasoline motor car which was very comfortable and ran smoothly enough so that we could write letters or read, and Ardith could study time tables with no difficulty, and which got us into Ann Arbor in time to catch an afternoon train for Jackson. We were met there by a huge jitney which was to convey us to Brooklyn. How nineteen of us with all our baggage got into that jitney is more than I can understand—but we were all placed some way. The driver was young and good looking, and Charlotte P. and Mary C. had a fine little flirtation with him until Louise (she knows him) informed them that he was married. This seemed to put a different face on affairs. Louise told us when we reached her town, but we would have known we were in some sort of a village, anyway, as the jitney stopped to let us out and we saw a

Nelson gradually losing everything.

¶ Thursday—Everybody hikes to bed as soon as the train arrives in Harbor Springs. Sleep all morning. Give a short program at the high school in the afternoon. At night the Club again appears before a large and appreciative audience. All attend a party after the concert. Dunbar pulls his three daily jokes. Smith and Cutting entertain several girls at once. Smith pulls for the track team.

¶ Friday—Everybody reports bright and early full of wim and wigor. Nelson still has some of his outfit left. Ring meets Annie at Petoskey and his morale goes up. The Club again advertise in the high school. Staake, Milroy and Gallup fail to get their daily letter and great was the gnashing of teeth thereof. Cutting, Smith and Milroy have a narrow escape while riding in a Jewish Show-case, belonging to a prominent junk man's daughter. Their machine crashed into a heavy truck, tearing off a tire and breaking both fenders. Milroy sprained his imagination. The constabule sign which said New Brooklyn Hotel. I wondered what the old one must have been like,—but I didn't say anything about it. There are many advantages to a small town,—so Louise told us—but I didn't see many, myself. Well, anyway the concert was very successful and the play very entertaining. I forgot my toothbrush—left it in Howell—I guess, so I didn't dare smile during the evening. I've also left my soap somewhere, but it's almost time to return to Kalamazoo, so it really won't matter.

¶ April 3—People in Brooklyn are early risers, I guess, for my hostess called me at ten o'clock. We were all at Every's home for lunch after which we visited the postoffice to see what we could find, and then returned to Jackson by means of the jitney. Charlotte Little left us in the morning, so we had a little more room. Ruth Hudson took her place as soloist. In Jackson we waited over two hours for a train. Ardith enjoyed herself studying time tables and the rest of us amused ourselves and the other patient waiters by singing "Is Everybody Happy?"—just to show that we were not losing our good dispositions at the same rate in which our appetites were increasing. However, we arrived in Leslie in time for supper, although the postoffice was closed. We found the place where the postmaster lived and when half the club raided his house, he yielded to our entreaties and opened the office for us, explaining that he was glad we didn't visit Leslie very often, as he had had more work to do than he had had since the war closed and the soldiers came back. Our concert was given in the church and just about as many things happened as could, during the evening, and yet have the entertainment a success. The climax of the evening was when the Lesliens moved the piano away before we were through with the dressing room—it was like removing one of the walls in a house and leaving the occuvociferously censured the fellows for taking the girl's attention from her driving. A fine crowd greets the songsters at the concert in spite of a raging snow storm.

¶ Saturday—The bunch enjoy a trip on the "dummy" line to East Jordan and everybody has a good time running ahead of the train and taking pictures. Staake gets an April fool letter from Marian. Cutting and Smith run to the depot to get their daily letters off to "Pink" and Ester. Four of the fellows eat onions for supper and the club puts across a strong concert. Dunbar plays a cornet solo in Nelson's place and strains himself so hard that he bursts his dress coat out under each arm. The usual after-the-concert-festivities are enjoyed.

¶ Sunday—The Club attend the Easter services at the first Presbyterian church of East Jordan and furnish part of the special music. Most of the fellows take auto rides in the afternoon while some write letters at the hotel. The entire evening service at the church is conducted by the Club. Smith's stories fail to entertain pants surprised and unprotected. We were all glad enough when all was over and we could return to our respective dwelling places and recuperate after our strenuous evening. We return to Kazoo tomorrow.

¶ April 4—I packed my suitcase for the last time till Wednesday, I hope. However, it's getting to be no trouble to pack, as my belongings know their respective places by now and almost automatically fall into them. We returned to Kalamazoo this morning and I've tried to regain my beauty by sleeping nearly all day.

¶ April 5—My main occupations today were sleeping and eating. No concert.

¶ April 6—Met my classes today, but as I am resting my voice, I very politely refused to recite. We Gaynorites compared notes with the Glee Club today.

¶ April 7—All aboard for Decatur. We gave our concert in the Opera House which is a fine building and has four dressing rooms which we duly appreciated. It also had an interesting trap door in the stage-floor, but as we kept Emily, Ardith and the other heavy people off it, no accident happened. During the concert, we were prevented from harmonizing perfectly by the fact that Peg neglected to use her music. She started us off on one of our encores and then changed keys and tried to run in competition to us. I don't know which won, but the audience was visibly moved and interested by this contest. Some even became so excited that they got up and left. Except for this slight mistake (and none but he who had a delicate ear, would have noticed any mistake) everything went well. After the concert the High School folks gave a party for us, and then escorted us to the depot. The train came at 1:45 a. m. and it carried back to Kazoo a rather pepless group of girls. But now all we have to do is College work and outside activities, so we ought to regain our pep before the Detroit trip.

Cutting. "Doc" is frantic because he doesn't hear from Adelaide. Dunbar of course pulls his three jokes about the "wicked cleaver", "M. I. O. O." and "Cutting sarcasm."

¶ Monday—Arrive in Traverse City and set watches ahead an hour. Morse and Staake entertain the nuts at the asylum. Sing at the high school. Grace Peterlyl introduces the gang to some fair damsels. When the Club appeared for their first number they were greeted by a thousand people, which we think is the largest crowd ever assembled to hear the Glee Club in the history of the school. After the concert the Club was invited to sing at a K. of P. dance and were given places at a banquet table as payment.

¶ Tuesday—The Glee arrive in Grand Rapids late in the afternoon. Enjoy a dinner dance at South High. Marian, Pink, Norda and Mrs. Cutting surprise the fellows by appearing in the audience.

¶ Wednesday—Arrive in Kazoo at 2 A. M. Thus ends a perfect trip.

† To the Junior class of this college we bequeath our stable of first class ponies, with the express provision that they be properly trained and cared for, in order that they may be in the pink of condition for the semi-annual races in February and June.

† To the Kalamazoo College Prohibition Association we bequeath the following recipe for home-brew, discovered by our eminent chemist, Jack Beaver: Place the juice of two tomato cans and the yolk of an egg in a wheel barrow; add some shaving cream and a piece of buttered toast; drop in a cake of yeast and shake well before using. The kick comes from the one who drinks it.

† To Maurice Armstrong, the much loved but little loving president of the Bachelors' Club, we bequeath Warren Burt's latest song hit, "Married Men May Have Better Halves, but Bachelors Have Better Quarters."

† To all those persons interested in solving the high cost of living we bequeath the suggestion of a Price-Cutting arrangement.

He asks any maid,

Has a head that resembles a broom,
For some fellow once tied
Both hands to his side
And used him to sweep out the room.

There's also a fellow, Don Norton,
Who seems to be quite fond of sportin',

We have a young fellow named Maurice

A Suggestion

Many people would like to get out a nice booklet in the interest of their business, but have never done so for several reasons, the most prominent of which may be the feeling of its costing too much. The cost of a booklet is regulated by just what you put into it—how attractive you wish to make it and what you wish to accomplish. We have many ideas that will enable you to produce a very attractive booklet at a nominal cost.

If you feel the need of this or any other kind of literature, we will gladly co-operate with you and tell you beforehand just what the cost will be.

A KID'S TRIBUTE TO DAD

Of all the men the world's produced
My father is the best,
And any girl with such a Dad
By pride should be possessed;

And fears God as he should.

I'd choose my Dad—I would!

From the diary of a Dorm man, dated 1873:

Wed., 14th. We had a great time tonight, and hope the good time we began will not end soon. We hadn't had any hot water in the Dorm for two weeks and so we took the janitor in and gave him a nice, cold shower (it was an ice cold one, too) just to show him what we have to stand for because he hasn't kept steam up. We were going to throw him in Mirror Lake at first, but his wife begged off for him . . .

Thurs., 22d. We have had hot water every day since last week Wednesday.
