September 11

Unfortunately, our generation now has its own "Where were you when..."
story. Our parents talk of story. Our parents talk of where they were the day John F. Kennedy was shot. Our grandparents remember what they were doing when they heard Pearl Harbor had been bombed. In this "new" time of peace and globalized friendship and alliances, we were naive, thinking we would never have our own "Where were you when.. story to tell.

On September 11 2001, our security wa ripped away by four successful groups of terrorist airline hijackers.

Following the attacks, many donated money to donated money to charities, returned to churches looking for answers, and relied on families for support and reassurance. The attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon may have wounded our hearts, but hey could not break our spirits.

This year's homecoming was an overwhelming succes for the K hornets. Angell Field was packed with students and alumni who cheered the team on to victory against Olivet Alumni were happy to come back to K and see a win, the first Homecoming win since 1995. Students were proud to see thei classmates dominating the field. In particular sophomore Dwight White delivered, scor ing five touchdowns for the Hornets. Sophomore Bryan Gnyp threw for 260 yards and three touch downs.

In the end, the Hornets defeated Olivet, 56-19, making a great showing and adding another winning game to their great season record.

Rain brings  spring fling  indoors

Spring Fling is an annual event put on by the Student Activi ties Committee. Although most students look forward to Spring Fling as the first day to get out the shorts and get a sunburn, this year that wa not exactly what happened. It was rainy and cold that day, so inflatable games and food were moved indoors. Students played shoeless through Old Welles instead of on the quad The events were no less fun, however, for those who participated. The inflatable obstacle course, velcro wall, boxing, and bungee basketball games kept students entertained. Ice cream, cotton candy, and airbrush tattoo artists filled the Hicks Center Lobby. Following the games, rock band "19 Wheels" played in Old Welles. A Kalamazoo College group opened.

glimpsing the Past

The fall, winter, and spring quarters and the activities they bring are intricately weaved into the history of the college. President Weimer Hicks brought the quarter system into existence in the early 1960s. In 1961, the college's new quarter system was featured in the December issue of Time magazine. The system revolutionized college education. Quarters have become a way of life and a vital part of the K-plan. The college itself, however, had more than 100 years of history before the quarter system and the K plan that we know today were ever in existence.

In 1833, the college began as the Michigan and Huron Institute, founded by Thomas W. Merrill and Judge Caleb Eldred. It was located in a single building at the present-day corner of Westnedge and Walnut. The corner was on the outskirts of the tiny town of Kalamazoo, population 100. This was the first institute of higher education in Michigan.

In 1845, the land on which the college now stands was bought for $$ 750$. The railroads then paid $$ 500$ to run the line through the college land, making the net cost of the land $$ 250$. In 1850, the college adopted a Baptist denomination, and more buildings were built to accommodate the increasing enrollment.

The charter for Kalamazoo College, the present-day institution, was signed in 1855. Through the efforts of college president J.A.B Stone and his wife Lucinda, the charter solidified the college's role as a progressive coeducational institution. Tuition in 1859 was five dollars for a ten week term, and one dollar and fifty cents for room and board. Although the college was growing, it was about to enter its "darkest thirty years." Political change and argument about the religious charter for the school caused many students and faculty to leave, including the Stones. The year the Stones left, the entire senior class withdrew in protest. Funding was low, and the survival of the college was in jeopardy. However, by the late 1800s Kalamazoo College regained its status as a thriving institution. Lower Hall, a classroom building, Upper Hall, the men's dormitory, and Wheaton Lodge, the ladies residence were added to the campus during this time period.

A time of change for the college began in 1911. Bowen Hall (the student center) was built, and the well-liked Dr Stetson was the college president. The college curriculum changed drastically, and army barracks, and makeshift mess hall was built on the campus near Bowen Hall. Mary "Minnie" Mandelle, friend of the college, was recognized twice during World War One by the Serbian government for her relief aid. Kalamazoo College also benefited from her generosity, receiving $350,000 to build Mandelle library, and receiving one-third of her estate after her death.

The years after the first World War through the 1950s were a period of growth and prosperity for the college. Enrollment more than doubled, the college endowment grew, and spirits were high. New buildings were built, carving the campus we see today out of the arcadian hill. The college did revolutionize the liberal arts education with the installation of the quarter system and ' $K$ ' plan in the early sixties. K college grew to have a reputation as one of the finest liberal arts college around, being called the "Harvard of the Midwest." A strong tradition of foreign study was built, and the college continued to prosper as it does today.

One cannot address the development of the college without mention of the city of Kalamazoo. Of course, the dominating Western Michigan University was not always the focus of the town. It was actually founded as Western Michigan Normal School, developed into Western Michigan Teacher's college, and then named Western Michigan University. Its enrollment did not surpass that of K College until the early 1900s, and it has grown ever since.

The city of Kalamazoo, of course, thrived during the Industrial Revolution with paper mills and other industry. Th main Detroit-Chicago railroad ran through the town, connecting Kalamazoo to the industrial lifeline in the Midwest, as it does today. Fantastic Victorian neighborhoods were built, including the Stuart neighborhood where many students now rent these Victorian homes. While many of these buildings have been de stroyed, some rich historical sites, such as the Henderson Castle and even the Academy Street brick still survive. The current Supercuts was once a drive-through hamburger stand, Gilmore's was the place to shop downtown, and many other places contributed to college students' experiences the way Boogie's and Jimmy John's are a part of our experience today.

The foundations of the baseball team, the first Kalamazoo college team, are not entirely known. However, we do know that by 1880 , a campus baseball team existed. The May issue of the Index from this year claims baseball as the favorite campus pastime. Some records also exist about baseball games against Albion in 1882. As a solid foundation of the sport, the team first competed in the MIAA in 1897.

Football was first introduced with a small college team in 1892. At that time, the team had Michigan State, University of Michigan, Notre Dame and Indiana as their opponents. Football was at first a controversial sport at the college because it was not an activity for its refined young men. However, its popularity increased, and it was condoned at an 1896 women's meeting.

CAPT. BURROWS Gaptian of the 1030 Gastelf off

With the building of the gymnasium in 1912, the first basketball team was formed. They won the MIAA for a decade beginning in their first year. In the 19211922 year, the football, track, tennis and cross country teams joined the basketball team as MIAA champions.

The long history of tennis a the college began in the 1890s with the formation of the first tennis team. It was coed, and began an outstanding record with its first MIAA championship in 1903. The tennis team went from good to the best, however, with the arrival of K alum Dr. Allen Stowe in 1922. Dr. Stowe, for whom Stowe Tennis Stadium is named, strengthened the team, beating out former consistent champs, Olivet College.

Solfing on the 2uad, 1958

The 1940s saw the beginnings of both golf and intramurals at the college. As sports became a more integral part of American life, it become essential to life at K. Intercollegiate athletics received more money, and competition became more fierce. The college also saw a rise in student sport-related activities, and the formation of bowling, table tennis, archery and other intramural clubs. Physical fitness and athletic ability became important to the college mindset, and the sports continued to develop into the tradition they are today.

the first step to grad school
Preprofessional groups have been large part of Kalamazoo College for many years. These groups allow students to interact with other students who have similar career goals. They also allow students to gain practical experience in their field, and to interac with professionals like the ones they hope to become. Because so many professions require graduate study today, many students form these groups to help build their resumes and to have a good time.

The Americal Chemical Society may be best known on campus for their liquid nitrogen ice cream, favorite campus treat. The Kalamazoo College chapter of this nationwide group gives chemistry majors an opportunity for community outreach and campus activities related to chemistry.

PEAC  and social awareness

The Non-Violent Student Organization, or NVSO participates each year in the School of the Americas march in Georgia. This march is a high-profile protest against the School of the Americas, a United States government-run military training school. The students in this organization promote peace and nonviolent social action both on campus and off-campus.

Many ' $\mathbf{K}$ ' students participated in the fall, 2001 protest at the School of the Americas. Here, a shot over the crowd shows a cluster of K students at the front.

The Student Activities Committee's goals are to provide campus-wide, free, nonalcoholic activi ties to students. Each year, SAC puts on thre dances, a fall festival, the talent show, and Spring Fling, in addition to other activities. In the 2001-2002 year, SAC brought a hypnotist, a game show, a number of movie nights, and exam week extravaganza.

While setting up stereo equipment, Karen Nave gives the thumbs up at Air Band, the student talen contest, which is sponsored by SAC.

DRA A inscripts, actions and words

The art of Theater is an important part of the K experience. Many K students choose to be involved in production, from acting to directing, sound to lighting. The Festival Playhouse's theme this year was "Disco ering identity within race, gender and community." In addition to the Playhouse's season, other productions took place, many as students SIPS or class projects. Seniors Liza Bielby, Ashley Jones and Jessica Hoff Ashley Jones and Jessica

Adam Kress Karell

Adam, your family is very proud of everything you have accomplished at Kalamazoo College. Through hard work and determination, you have achieved your many goals in Theatre and Cross Country. Additionally, we know that your humor, your laughter, and your joy will be sorely missed on campus. You are a very special young man. Your grandfather, Duane E. Kress, a 1934 graduate of Kalamazoo College, would have been thrilled as well.

Celebrate!

a four-year-Thank You

An editor has so many things to say. I have a year's worth to say to my staff, 4 years' worth to say to my classmates, and a lifelime's worth to say to the college.

The history of the college has fascinated me in my four years here. The idea for this book lingered in my head, not because I want to dwell on the past, but because I want to look to the future It has been a turbulent four years at Kalamazoo College. We have rebounded from a change in the quarter system, mourned losses, celebrated gains, and moved forward.

While moving forward, it is important to learn from and cherish our past. I love every page of this book. The pictures from the past and the present show that we too, are part of something big. Whether or not our cynical young minds want to beleive it, we are are undeniably part of something great. It is comforting to know that there is a community here that nobody can tear away from $u$ s, and four years of irreplaceable memories. These were, after all, our college years.

I will miss the class of 2002, I hope that future classes will carry the college high on their shoulders, and cherish their time here as well. Thank-you $\mathcal{K}_{\text {, for four years, for changing me, for }}$ changing my classmates, and for a lifetime of memories. -Stephanie Bonne

To my Staff:
Gindy, my savior: This book has come together beautijully because of your efforts. I never wa sure what possessed you to spend so much time on something like this, your senior year but whatever something like this, your senior year, but whatever it was, I am infinitely grateful for all your it was, I am infinitely grateful for all your dedication. I also thank you for a friendship I didn't expect to find. Keep in touch Gon, the behind-the scenes guy. Thanks for letting me twist your arm into all the hours messing with the computer. You didn't have to, and probably didnt want to, but thanks anywa).
Mristina, the superroommate. Thanks for all the calls, the tracking down pictures, and going to random campus events. I'm grateful for your continued dedication.
Tiich, able to track down anything. Thanks for being there to find or take that picture we needed on the last day of a deadline. Your help made this book come together in ways I dont think you completely know Betsy, Anne, Audrey, Marybeth: I know things are rough, but do what you can to keep this going. The school needs something like this. Enjoy the rest of your time here.

4 thanks here and there: Pam, our advisor, you were such a big help, and such great motivation, thanks so much! Barb thanks for all your help and input. Elizabeth, in the archives, you are such an inspiration and a reat source of knowledge. Thanks for all your pinion 1 hope you like the product. Your Thanks to Student Commission for the precious. dollars, the fantastic ladies in the business office bookstore and mail center for being pleasant and helpful. Most of all, thanks to all the studens and parents who made this book possible.
