As the Alumnus goes to press, the Seventeenth Annual Fund has gone over the goal by $2,830.46. The total in gifts, hitting an all-time record in number and amount from alumni and friends, now stands at $102,830.46. In addition, the College has received a $15,000 challenge gift, making a grand total of $117,830.46. The drive's success will assure a balanced operating budget for the fourth consecutive year and will enable the College to continue the remodelling of fifty-four-year-old Bowen Hall.

A listing of alumni donors whose gifts were received prior to the closing of this magazine begins on page 9. A followup report will appear in the April Issue.

To date, records show that 40% of the Kalamazoo College Alumni Association has contributed to the Annual Fund. This all-time high can be compared to the 35% of last year, and also to the tremendous increase since 1952 and the 9% participation that year. Further, in 1952, alumni gifts represented 20% of the total 1952 goal of $55,000; this year, alumni gifts represent 49% of the $100,000 goal.

The class of 1915 raised its top percentage of 63% in 1955 to 70% for 1956. So far, the class of 1950 again leads in number of gifts with 70 members of that class as donors; this is a gain over last year of 13 alumni. The largest percentage gain was shown by the class of 1944—1955, 23%; 1956, 50%. The classes with 50% or more response were 1916, 1924, 1926, 1944, 1901 to 1903, 1912, 1919, 1920, 1914, and 1915.

You may spot the percentage of participation of your class on the following chart. You still have time to do something about it!

THE STATUS QUO

By Dr. Weimer K. Hicks

During the recent Annual Fund, which broke all records in number of donors and amount subscribed, the chairman of the General Division received the following letter from a loyal alumna now living on a teacher's pension:

"Enclosed herewith is a modest check for the Annual Fund. I am writing to explain my very small contribution—a mere drop in the bucket for those who must think in millions of dollars.

I have been told that Kalamazoo College is one of the richest small colleges in the country. I am glad and I do wish it well, but feel unable to be of much assistance."

After our chairman had read the letter and recognized the thought motivating the gift, he wrote a masterful reply:

Dear Friend:

There is no need for you to explain what you call a "very small contribution" to Kalamazoo College. As a former neighbor, I know of the many years you have devoted to teaching the youth of the city. I know, too, that your continued interest in youth, as manifested by your financial help in the Annual Fund, is but typical of the life of service to others which has been yours. In your note you say you have been told that Kalamazoo College is one of the richest small colleges in the country. It is—but not in the way most people regard riches.

Kalamazoo College is rich in friends, rich in tradition, as you well know, and rich in service. It has a record of achievement of its alumni which ranks it at the pinnacle of American college contributions to the American way of life.

Financially, Kalamazoo College is rather poor. Its endowment is but a fraction of many colleges its size, although an effort is now being made to increase it. The bequest of Mrs. Wallace brought the endowment funds back above the level of the early 1930's before the depression took its toll. But the interest yield from endowed funds is now much less than formerly, and the buying power of these earnings is only a fraction of what it formerly was.

So—Kalamazoo College will continue to need the good wishes, and the financial support of good friends like you. Thank you again for your contribution and for all the fine things you do in our community.

Admiring regards,
Ralph Ralston
Chairman of General Division

In the lines of this letter our chairman succinctly analyzed the status quo of this College and many similar institutions. All over America, colleges and universities are appraising their assets and liabilities and are projecting their thinking to the impending educational bulge. Harvard University, wealthiest educational institution in the country, recently announced an ambitious fund-raising program of $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 for the undergraduate college alone. Chicago and Northwestern are undertaking development programs above the $35,000,000 figure. The status of Kalamazoo, and all higher education, was aptly summarized by Dr. Nathan Pusey, president of Harvard, when he said, "The time has not come—will never come—when higher learning in America can properly devote itself to the maintenance of positions won. Its task is still to build, and the time is always now."

Kalamazoo College will reach its 125th anniversary in 1958, a significant milestone in the life of any institution. As the oldest college in the state, our celebration will carry added connotations. On this memorable occasion, do we not have a responsibility to take inventory of our needs and determine that we will answer them?

The needs at Kalamazoo might be divided into two categories. First, the adding of additional buildings to complete the "perfect" campus for a small liberal arts college of restricted and selected enrollment. Kalamazoo is fortunate in having only a limited number of new physical requirements. No loyal alumnus or interested friend can be happy with the present crowded dormitory situation. No one can be satisfied with the student union in Welles Hall nor the dining facilities which now are sorely taxed, with the College still eighty students below the projected capacity of 630. Nor can we be content indefinitely with a gymnasium built in 1902, with a basketball court four feet narrower than regulation. And what about the music house and the auditorium at the third floor level of Bowen Hall?

There is also a second category of needs, labeled as endowment reserves. While our combined endowment and reserves will approach $3,000,000, they are insufficient to maintain an academic program commensurate with the achievement of our graduates. We should have reserves approaching $10,000,000. Included in this category should be new professorships to relieve the budgetary burden of faculty salaries, increased funds for the library, and an unlimited number of endowed scholarships which will make it possible for us to assist the worthy student.

How can these concerns be answered? The expansion of the physical plant should be made a primary concentration of the 125th anniversary as we not only pay tribute to the founding fathers but also determine that our service to students in the future may be greater than our leadership of the past. The second category of needs, in the area of scholarships and endowments, can best be answered in the estate planning of alumni and friends. As we look in retrospect, legacies from two women, Miss Minnie Mandelle and Mrs. Winifred Dewing Wallace, have meant more to the financial stability of the College than any philanthropies in which the College has shared. Living as we do in an era of vanishing estates, it is increasingly important that hundreds of alumni and friends remember the College in their estate-planning.

The months just ahead will largely determine the future of the College. In the century and a quarter of our existence we have built solidly. Today, records place Kalamazoo College near the top in the baccalaureate origins of future scientists. None would deny the sound academic standing offered in all fields. Yet we cannot stand still or we will inevitably retrogress. Having achieved great recognition in the field of science, should we not strive with equal ardour to make an impact in all the disciplines? To do this demands a superior faculty, professors who are attracted by our reputation, our equipment, and the quality of our student body.

In the final analysis, ours is a responsibility of developing capable and alert youth, sensitive to ideas, with an understanding of life and an eagerness to move into positions of leadership in the years ahead. They are the life-blood of America. The future of our College depends on attracting a sizable number and of challenging them with the opportunities afforded through ideas and understanding, and the inculcation of ideals by which they can live and lead. They are our priceless heritage. For them we must build an ever-greater educational opportunity.

According to the present building schedule, Mary Trowbridge House, women's dormitory pictured above, will have a new wing to be completed by August 1, 1957. The new addition, now under construction at the west end of the building (the right side of the picture), is designed to handle ninety women. It will be a four story edifice, and accommodations for the ninety girls will be in sets of two double rooms with connecting bathroom. The structure will cost approximately $325,000 including furnishings. The building is being financed by corporation and personal gifts. Last May, the Kresge Foundation offered a challenge gift of $50,000 provided the building was financed and ready for occupancy by 1958. The women's dormitory facilities at Kalamazoo College have been taxed. In order to accommodate this year's enrollment, Mary Trowbridge House has been filled to capacity, and four of the women students have been residing at the home of President and Mrs. Hicks.

One of the most beautiful sites in the city, the Alfred Connable estate, has been purchased by Kalamazoo College. The residence and three and one-half acres of land are located just two blocks from the campus on Prospect Street. At this time, the use of the property is uncertain, but the purchase offers a most desirable opportunity for future development.

ACCENT ON THE KNEE

By C. Conrad Browne '43

It can't happen here! But it is! Right here in America it is taking place—in the land of the free, the land of religious freedom. The same insidious forces that turned Germany into a Nazi state, the very same enemy that our sons have died on foreign soils to eliminate, is at work in our own society—our own country.

When we read about Jewish men in Germany discussing the disappearance of their friends with the words, "Well, they ought to get rid of those 'kiky' Jews," we wondered what it was in men that could lead them to such indifference. When we read or heard a discussion of the passive resistance movement in India, we have been easily persuaded that if it had been a more ruthless enemy than the British, India would not have won their freedom. When we heard discussions about abnegation of basic freedoms and religious ideals, too easily we have said, "It couldn't happen in America, the land of the free, the home of the brave."

In the southeast, a small group of pioneering idealists are feeling the sting of the whip lash of white supremacy. Violence is still its instrument though lynchings have decreased. Crosses are still being burned although the hooded secret orders are less in view than before. Non-violence and legal are the terms in which the hate is shrouded, but every now and then the chaos of the fermentation bursts forth in specific destructions—a bombing, a shooting, a beating, public vilifications, etc.

And where is the moral stamina of the men who will withhold services without being free to make known their source of fear? Where is the idealism of the men who see no connection with religious principles when they shut off the source of livelihood to a group of men, women and children? Where is the democracy in the pressure to remove a group because of their "difference in belief?"

Fourteen years ago, two families, enkindled by the vision of the Community of Believers, came to Americus, Georgia, to join their resources as they felt the early church had done after Pentecost. In working out their life together they agreed that the fruits of the joy they had found in their commitment to the Christ was expressed in the following ways. 1. That men in the Church would want to share everything they had with the fellowship and would receive their needs in return. 2. That since people became brothers in the family of God there would be no distinctions of class, color, or creed. 3. That just as in a family, violence is ruled out as a means of dealing with problems, so here in the community of the Father, violence would not be a means of establishing relations. 4. That openness and frankness with one another was essential in creating the bonds of the family.

Charles Conrad Browne, alumnus of Kalamazoo College and a graduate of the University of Chicago Divinity School, is at present director of the Koinonia Farm Camp, Americus, Georgia. Koinonia, a Christian experiment in racial equality, was brought to further national attention in an article in "Time" on September 17. The Reverend Mr. Browne, "A minister of the Gospel whose life has exemplified a singular devotion and commitment to his understanding of Christian faith and nurture," was awarded a citation last October by the University of Chicago Divinity School as The Divinity School Man of the Year.

Until the war had ended, the group did not grow rapidly, but as young people came back to civilian life, many of them who had been seeking for a deeper expression of their Christian idealism joined the Koinonia. There has been a steady increase until now the community consists of ten families and several single people totalling around 60 persons.

The founders agreed to buy four hundred acres and through some remarkable incidents were able to pay for it even though their combined resources when they arrived at the farm were only $59.00. (The farm now includes nearly 1100 acres.) Koinonia was the name chosen as a result of the study which had led them together. Koinonia is a word used in the New Testament (Greek) which is translated as fellowship but more accurately means those who have things in common. From the beginning the venture was one of faith which today expresses itself in the quip, "Koinonia, accent on the knee."

After several years of integrated vacation Bible Schools (in which a number of the white neighbors assisted) the Koinonia launched a new venture—an interracial summer camp. In 1955 the camp was instituted with a successful season. Plans were drawn up to have a camp again in 1956. A week before it was to open, the County Health Commissioner swore out an injunction based on a good bit of misinformation. The report on which it was supposed to have been founded

DYNAMICS OF CAPITALISM

Paul C. Staake '21, president of Webber College in Babson Park, Florida, generously accepted the writing for the "Alumnus" of a review of the recently published book, "The Dynamics of Capitalism," authored by Dr. Julius T. Wendzel '28. Mr. Staake is well-known to the Kalamazoo College family for he has served as both a professor and as alumni director on our campus. Mrs. Staake is the former Marian Hoek '21.

In preparation for expressing my personal opinion of Dr. Julius T. Wendzel's book, THE DYNAMICS OF CAPITALISM, I tried an experiment. I asked one of my colleagues on the faculty, who teaches business subjects here at Webber College, to read it and use whatever time he desired for a discussion at one of our faculty group meetings held every week for the purpose of swapping ideas and integrating our departments. So interested was he, and his listeners, in the subject as presented by Dr. Wendzel, that the full hour was given over to considering the "Correctives Toward Continuous Growth" as advocated by the author.

Now that I have taken the book into my own study for reading and reflection, I think I know why our faculty was so enthusiastic about this scholarly and realistic approach to one of the most important problems in our economy today—how to preserve and expand our free enterprise system by facilitating growth and by avoiding the extremes of boom and depression. In his approach to the subject, Dr. Wendzel has admirably analyzed and projected the psychological factors along with the economic. He looks at the whole pattern with the full realization that the same imagination which has made America really remarkable can be skillfully and scientifically controlled and guided into the right channels without inhibiting its power. I like the book because it can be read with interest by those busy decision-makers as well as by those who take their abstract economics most seriously, as a professional economist should. College students will like it because of its clarity of thought and expression and its forthright manner of presenting the trends and potentials of Capitalism without fanfare or apology.

Just as the atomic-age calls for atomic concepts of religion and philosophy, it also requires some rethinking along the lines presented by Dr. Wendzel's book, especially in the present challenge to production caused by a rapidly increasing population and an ever-increasing desire for higher living standards.

Mass communication and mass education have given mankind, generally, a picture of the potentials of higher living standards. This has caused a group discontent—perhaps we can call it a "divine discontent" leading to the path of more abundant living.

It is the thoughtful conviction of the author that the DYNAMICS OF CAPITALISM can be the dynamo of energy needed in the world today if we have the vision, courage and the gumption to provide capital to new enterprises, large and small, when needed, and to insure healthy competition without the disastrous cyclical disruptions.

The book will appeal especially to all "how-to-do-it" statesmen and entrepreneurs who like their academic theories generously flavored with the salt of workable procedures.

I sincerely hope that this book has a widespread distribution because its message is greatly needed right now when the economic and spiritual challenge to America is so vital.

Dr. Julius T. Wendzel '28, author of the reviewed book, "The Dynamics of Capitalism," is shown in the center of the above photograph. The picture was taken on November 19 at the Bi-partisan Day Conference held on the campus. Dr. Wendzel served as moderator for the panel of political leaders from both parties. Shown with Dr. Wendzel are State Senator Carlton H. Morris '38, College vice president Dr. Harold T. Smith, Dr. Wendzel, Dr. Sam Clark, and Congressman August E. Johansen. Dr. Wendzel received his doctor's degree in economics from Harvard University and subsequently held professorships in economics at Tufts College, Harvard University and Kalamazoo College, where he headed the department. For eleven years he was in the government service, acting as chief economist in the Department of Agriculture and later as chief fiscal analyst in the executive office of the president. He is now Economic Program Director of the Upjohn Institute for Community Research.

AT WORK ON ANNIVERSARY

Above, Dr. Arnold Mulder, professor emeritus of English, ponders the final touches to the history of Kalamazoo College he is writing, covering the past twenty-five years. The book will be published this spring and will be available for purchase by alumni during the anniversary year.

Miss Sue Slayton '15 is shown at the right, examining samples of Wedgwood plates at the College Bookstore. Miss Slayton is serving on Ralph Ralston's Mementos Committee, and they are making a selection of a Wedgwood commemorative plate for Kalamazoo College which will be among the mementos you will want to have, marking this anniversary observance.

Many phases of the work for the 125th anniversary of Kalamazoo College, to be observed during the academic year, 1957-1958, are well under way. A second all-day session will be held on January 19 for the major planning committees, including Homecoming, Commencement, the Convocation, Publicity and Promotion, Mementos, and Regional Alumni Meetings.

Dr. H. Lewis Batts '43 of the biology department is supervising the filming of a special anniversary production for use at alumni meetings during the anniversary year. Dr. Batts is shown at the right, working on campus scenes. The film will be twenty minutes in length and will be in color, with sound. He is being assisted in the script by Mrs. Donald Balch, College drama director.

SUMMER IN VERMONT

By Miss Nancy West '57

Last summer I had the privilege of attending Breadloaf School of English in Middlebury, Vermont. This was made possible by a scholarship provided for the funds given by Mrs. Winfred Wallace. This scholarship is given as a memorial to Mrs. Wallace and will be given annually by the English Department to an English major so that he or she can attend Breadloaf during the summer between his junior and senior years.

Breadloaf is a unique type of graduate school. Designed primarily for high school teachers who wish to obtain a M.A. in literature, it operates only in the summertime. Because of this, the school is able to employ many fine teachers who teach at schools such as Princeton and Smith during the regular academic year. Set in the Green Mountains, this school provides a stimulating combination of work and recreation which is advantageous to both students and faculty.

I believe that I profited greatly from my summer at Breadloaf. Certainly the summer was a memorable one for many reasons. In the first place, I had the opportunity to do work under other professors. This gave me the chance to consider certain aspects of literature from a different point of view. Furthermore, I met and talked with a few undergraduates from other schools and many high school teachers. Most outstanding of all, perhaps, was the fact that at Breadloaf I heard Robert Frost, Malcolm Cowley, a well-known critic, and Richard Eberhardt, a modern poet, give lectures.

The most significant aspect of the summer for me was, of course, the classes I took. They gave me the opportunity to round out my general knowledge in certain areas where I was especially lacking, and they also allowed me to study the material covered with a certain amount of intensity which is impossible in an undergraduate school because of the number of courses which must be taken.

The most surprising — and gratifying — fact that I learned this summer was that graduate courses are not much more difficult than the courses given here at Kalamazoo. Even though I have not completed

Miss Nancy West, Kalamazoo College senior from Newton, Mass., was the first recipient of the Winifred Dewing Wallace Memorial Scholarship for a summer's study for an undergraduate majoring in English to study abroad or at one of the leading American summer schools in English. Miss West spent last summer at Breadloaf, Middlebury College in Vermont. She is an outstanding student, and among her extracurricular activities, she has served as vice president of the Student Senate.

Another phase of the Winifred Dewing Wallace Memorial Program in English brought to the campus on November 26, the distinguished English scholar, author and critic, Dr. David Daiches. First to appear in the English lecture series, Dr. Daiches spoke on "The Contemporary English Novel."

my undergraduate training, I found that the English Department had given me very adequate preparation for graduate courses. There was a greater amount of work to be done at Breadloaf, but the level was no higher than in our English courses here at Kalamazoo. This statement is not a deprecation of Breadloaf. Its reputation is deservedly high. One proof of this is the fact that any graduate school which accepts credits from other schools will accept credits from Breadloaf. The fact that the level of the English courses here is on a par with that of Breadloaf is, rather, an affirmation of the fact that Kalamazoo College maintains a high academic level of which it can be justly proud.

SPEAKING OF BOOKS

By Dr. Arnold Mulder

Some time ago a campaign of releases told us in eloquent language that the "Bible is the world's best seller." The statistics are almost certainly correct; the chances are that no other book, or more correctly no other literature, can come within shouting distance of the sales record of the Bible.

But no matter how reliable the statistics are, they do not at all prove that the Bible is the world's most widely read book. While nearly all families that are reasonably literate own at least one copy, there are no figures as to how many people actually read it.

Communities differ widely on this score. There are whole sections of America in which the Bible is read constantly by the mass of the population; such areas have even become known as the "Bible belt." But there are many other sections where the Bible is largely a closed book.

Quite recently a famous radio commentator who mixes advertising with entertainment and newscasts offered a Bible as a "bonus" with his product. That product was not a famous brand of cigarettes, but something almost as incongruous. The "bonus" was a zippered Bible, the zipper being for the purpose of keeping out the dust! The humor of that did not seem to strike the radio man; it did not appear to have occurred to him that putting a zipper on the Bible had connotations that his sponsors would be the last to encourage. It would be interesting to learn how many of the thousands of zippered Bibles he awarded were actually read by his customers.

Professors of literature in the colleges and universities have joined the ranks of those who have developed doubts as to the actual reading of the Bible by those who are keeping it in the best-selling list. English literature is of course impregnated with the thought and even the phraseology of the Bible. From Chaucer through Shakespeare through Milton and Wordsworth and Carlyle and Ruskin and Tennyson and Browning, down to T. S. Eliot and Kipling and all the others, the Bible is a common source of literary inspiration.

That means that only those who have actually read the Bible and have made its language and ideas their own are in a good position to understand and appreciate English literature. And the professors of literature are virtually unanimous in complaining that the present day student is hopelessly deficient in this cultural training.

This is so true that in some English courses in colleges and universities the study of the Bible is made a required part of the discipline. While that is to the good, the English professors are finding out that a formal course cannot begin to make up for the lack of Bible reading that, during the nineteenth century and earlier, was almost as unself-consciously common as breathing.

Leaving religion out of it, the neglect of Bible reading results in neglect of great literature. The Joseph story, for instance, is unsurpassed as narrative in any literature; the Ruth story has seldom been equaled in literary charm; the Esther story has as good a plot structure as the most skillful examples in its genre today; the Psalms contain some of the greatest poems in the literature of mankind; the Book of Ecclesiastes is uniquely great — there is nothing comparable to it in literary history. And the Book of Job belongs among the half dozen greatest works of the imagination achieved by man upon this globe since writing was invented.

"Best seller"? Without a doubt. Most widely read? Almost certainly not.

was not made until after the injunction was signed by the judge. The injunction forced the camp to be held in Monteagle, Tennessee, last summer.

About the same time, a number of Atlanta University students wanted to continue their educations at Georgia State College which was the only school in Georgia to offer the courses they needed. Two members of the Koinonia counselled with the students and agreed to go with them to talk to the President of the College where they would lay their needs and desires before the school. As a result of this attempt to keep the actions above board and open, many people, misinformed by news articles, immediately jumped to conclusions about the actions and beliefs of "this strange sect."

Just after the first of three hearings on the injunction in July, 1956, the Roadside Market — one of the Koinonia enterprises — was bombed (about $3000 damage). The signs advertising the Market along the highway had previously been removed or burned. The story received rather wide coverage in the news channels, but many of these articles were primary in leading to other overt actions. Almost immediately insurance was cancelled on everything (Insurance is now held with a company in New Zealand — but only to cover the acts of God — not the acts of men.), egg markets dropped from over 100 cases a week to about 25 cases a week, feed and seed dealers refused to sell to the farm, the gasoline agent discontinued deliveries, cotton mills refused to gin cotton, peanut mills refused to buy peanuts, recently the local bank refused to loan operating capital which it had been doing since 1943, and the source of butane gas has been cut off. Little by little the economic boycott has been tightened.

The Roadside Market, which is five miles from the main farm, was the scene of another attempt at intimidation when repeated shots were pumped into it from a passing car. Fifty-five slugs were found in the building and in the operating equipment (about $300 damage).

ON CAMPUS

This fall one of the school children was beaten up at school. A local gentleman incited the youngsters to run this "nigger lover" out of town. As a result a fourteen year old child of Koinonia is attending school 1500 miles away from home.

The overt incidents, while bad, are not nearly as distressing as the lack of moral stamina which merchants and church members have exhibited. Not one of the merchants has identified any source of the threats which have been made to him. One man acknowledged that no one had cut him off nor had anyone threatened him . . . yet, but he was afraid of what might happen. The bank president, who was not free to discuss the situation deeper than to pass on the Board's negative decision, admitted that he thought everyone should have the right to believe as they were led. When it was pointed out that evidently the Board did not see it this way and that this was a basic religious freedom, he replied that there were no religious principles involved—this was strictly business.

How many times I have recalled that hymn, "Rise Up O Men of God, have done with lesser things!" And it is not all gloom. There are people in the neighborhood who have risked a good bit to show that they are friendly, even though they may not agree with the fundamentals of the community—a young minister here, another across the county, a farmer close by, another who drives 20 miles to play volley ball with the men of the group regularly, and who does not hesitate to identify himself with Koinonians on the streets, a clerk in a store, persons who have no other way than to buy at the Roadside Market, and some who quietly quell rumors and misinformation. Yes, there are there bright lights in the situation.

And another hymn—

Once to every man and nation
Comes the moment to decide.

It is the whole world that looks at America's moment of decision. What is done here will shape the opinion of the world. This is the microcosm of the world's macrocosm. Will it reflect the calling to

At the dinner in conjunction with Science Evening on November 16, attended by more than 200 high school science students in Southwestern Michigan and more than 100 high school science teachers, presentation was made of a newly established Clarage Foundation Science Scholarship at Kalamazoo College. Harry R. Clarage '11, president of the Clarage Fan Company, presented an annual $1,600 scholarship for students who have demonstrated an aptitude and interest in science and mathematics. The scholarship will begin with the fall semester of 1957 and will provide the recipient with $400 for each of his four years of study. Shown above are Dr. Weimer K. Hicks, Mr. Clarage, Dr. Ralph O. Kerman, head of the physics department, and Robert A. Wasson, vice president and general manager of Clarage Fan. Following the dinner, the campus guests for Science Evening heard an address in Stetson Chapel by Dr. John A. Hornbeck, director of electron tube development at the Bell Telephone Laboratories. Dr. Hornbeck is the son of the late Dr. John W. Hornbeck who headed the physics department at Kalamazoo College from 1926 to 1951 and who won national acclaim for his teaching in the field of physics.

A project sponsored by the junior class to raise funds for Hungarian university refugees netted over $300. The class auctioned faculty services—from polishing shoes and washing cars to serving breakfast in bed!

A modern adaptation of a classic Greek drama, "Antigone," was the late fall production of the Kalamazoo College Players. The Jean Anouilh play was under the direction of Mrs. Donald Balch, and leading roles were taken by Miss Sally Wilson of Chicago and William Vincent, Kalamazoo.

Always a highlight of the holiday season on the campus, the traditional Carol Service was held on December 9. Miss Constance Metzger, Greenville, was the freshman selected for the honor of representing the Spirit of Christmas. Miss Sally Smith, Flint, was the Christmas Reader. Student directors of the choir of fifty voices were the Misses Jean Hilton and Marcia Johnston.

SPORTS

By Dick Kishpaugh

Kalamazoo College completed a highly-successful fall sports season in 1956 by winning the first Hornet MIAA cross-country championship since 1932 and by finishing second to Hillsdale in football. The excellent showing gave Kalamazoo a six-point lead in the standings for the MIAA All-Sports trophy, an honor which the Hornets missed by a very narrow margin last year.

Last spring, Albion edged Kalamazoo for the All-Sports award, one of the deciding factors being Albion's win over the Hornets in cross-country. This fall, however, it was a different story as Coach Allen Buskirk's team swept all league opposition with ease in dual meets. In the MIAA run at Alma, the Hornets scored a thrilling 31-32 victory over Albion to take the title away from the Britons for the first time in many years.

Jim Wallace, freshman from Kalamazoo Central High School, was unbeaten in league competition and was named Most Valuable Runner for 1956 and Captain for 1957. Dave Tripp, another freshman from Kalamazoo Central, was voted the Most Improved Runner.

Coach Rolla Anderson's football team, though failing to win the league title, nevertheless won the lion's share of league honors. The crucial championship game with unbeaten Hillsdale saw the Hornets trail by only a 21-14 margin going into the final period, but the Dales pulled away to a 41-14 victory in proving their right to their reputation as one of the nation's finest small-college teams.

When the All-MIAA teams were announced, Kalamazoo had won three places on the first team and narrowly missed two other places. Tackle Phil Perry, end Vic Landeryou, and quarterback Bob Urschaltz made the first team; guard John Sweet, a first-team choice a year ago, and center Ken Mosier, a first-team selection back in 1950, were placed on the 1956 second team.

The Hornets and Hillsdale shared statistical honors for the season, with Bob Urschaltz of Kalamazoo coping the passing and total offense titles. Jim Fowler of the Hornets had the best punting average, and Vic Landeryou barely missed being the league's pass-receiving champion.

The top honor, however, came as a complete surprise to team members. The Hornets' fall sports teams held a highly-successful dinner-dance in place of the traditional banquet, and at that time the announcement was made that Urschaltz had been named the league's Most Valuable Player. Randall Bosch of Holland, originator of the award given to the winner of this honor, was on hand to present the gold football trophy in a surprise ceremony.

Other honors for the season went to Dave White, who was voted the Most Improved Player, to Ken Mosier, voted the "Oil Can" award for his wit and good spirits, and to Urschaltz and Phil Perry, who were named 1957 Co-Captains. Urschaltz, of course, was named Kalamazoo's Most Valuable Player.

CLUB ACTIVITY

Robert Barrows '42, president of the Rochester, N.Y., Alumni Club — and who will be remembered for his Oskar column in the "Index," sent in the following report: "On Friday evening, November 9, the Rochester Alumni Club gathered in the Forrest Strome's home for an evening of entertainment mainly in the form of square dancing. The dancing continued with rousing enthusiasm after an intermission of sipping cider and would have persisted far into the night had not Edith Strome accidentally (she claims) knocked the pile of square-dance records onto the floor. Three disks were smashed, bringing peace to the basement recreation room and quiet to the upstairs where the two Strome offspring were trying to sleep.

"Thence unfolded a cleverly-concocted plot in the way of refreshments. Attractively wrapped boxes were carefully piled onto a table and the gentlemen were asked to bid, not knowing which box had been prepared and brought by whose lady. John Basnett was so enthralled by a scenic display on a box that he bid $32 for it (but paid only 32 cents), and promptly proceeded to plop the box on the floor, upside down to the horror of the girls; the pie survived.

"Two couples who are students at the Colgate-Rochester Divinity School entered into the festivities, Dick and Mary Lou Crooks, and making their first appearance with the Rochester alumni, Fred and Kathleen Hudson. Jack and Evelyn Stalter were in charge of the evening's fun under the guidance of Mary Discher, the Club's social chairman." The next affair will be a reception in February for prospects interested in Kalamazoo College among the area high school seniors.

Newly-elected officers at the Lansing Alumni Club meeting on November 18 are William Buchanan '14, president; Ruth Demme Hayes '37, vice president; and Arleigh Dodson '55, secretary-treasurer. Clifford Hunt '37 is the retiring president. The Club is planning a program for prospective students from the area, to be held on January 16 in the Social Room of Sexton High School.

An alumnae tea, sponsored by the Kalamazoo Club of Detroit, was a very nice occasion on November 18. Attended by forty alumnae, it was held in the home of Dr. '37 and Mrs. Paul J. Connolly (Harriette Barton '37). Assisting Mrs. Connolly were Virginia Fowler Brandle '49, Nancy Giffels '50, and Mrs. Joe DeAgostino.

Under the direction of Forrest Pearson '41, Robert Braithwaite '43, and Clifford Hunt '37, presidents of the Southwestern Michigan, St. Joseph Valley, and Lansing Alumni Clubs, respectively, these areas conducted personal solicitation campaigns in connection with the Annual Fund. All but some minor follow-up work has been completed, and the Clubs deserve hearty congratulations. Present percentages of participation are St. Joseph Valley, 77%; Lansing, 55%; Southwestern Michigan, 45%.

Matching-gift programs have now been established by several corporations as a further development of the concern of business and industry in the support of education. This Corporate Alumnus concept, as it is called, was first begun by General Electric Company in November of 1954. Similar programs have now been adopted by the twenty-eight companies listed below. If you are an employee of one of them, you will want to obtain their corporate alumnus form to learn the details of the program. YOUR GIFT to Kalamazoo College WILL DOUBLE, for these companies will match individual gifts to education. In most cases, the programs apply not only to graduates but to former students who have attended college for a minimum of one academic year.
