COLLEGE
BETA

Kalamazoo College has been granted a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholastic fraternity. Approval of the Chapter was voted by the national Phi Beta Kappa Council on August 30. The Chapter will be known as the Delta Chapter of Michigan.

Installation of the Chapter is planned for the evening of December 9, with President Lawrence M. Gould, president of Carleton College and president of the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa, presenting the charter. Some student members may be chosen at that time.

Initial members from the Kalamazoo College faculty include Dr. Ivor D. Spencer, head of the history department; Dr. Justin H. Bacon, professor emeritus of French; Dr. Edward Moritz, of the history department; Dr. Kurt D. Kaufman and Dr. Bruce R. McGarvey of the chemistry department; Douglas W. Peterson, head of the department of education; and Dr. Lester J. Start, head of the department of philosophy.

Charters are granted by the national body every three years. Kalamazoo College was the only college approved in this triennium. Dean Nancy Duke Lewis of Pembroke College and Dean George V. Kendall of Wabash College, of the committee on qualifications, visited the College in February, 1957, and an extensive report under the direction of Dr. Ivor Spencer was submitted to Phi Beta Kappa for its study.

A NEW DICHOTOMY

By Dr. Weimer K. Hicks

The achievements of the Anniversary Year, for which we are deeply grateful, are well known to all of you. Through the successful financial program and the enthusiasm it engendered, the College reached a new plateau. And yet, as we begin the second quarter of our second century, we are confronted with a new dichotomy the answer to which will largely determine whether Kalamazoo will keep pace with the better co-educational institutions of the nation. Our problem concerns itself with the faculty, which remains the very lifeblood of the institution.

We are today emerging into a new era in which the position of the college professor is changing. For several generations, the stature of the pedagogue has been very low. In the post-war years, in which inflation has dominated, he has found the purchasing power of his salary quite inadequate. He has largely paid for the education of America's youth, primarily through his willingness to work for a pittance.

The growing interest of business leaders in education, the obvious need for more teachers than can be supplied, the effects of Sputnik and Russian education, and the concern of Americans for the entire school system are bringing about a change. Meanwhile, shifting faculty populations indicate that the typical professor is not digging his roots as deeply as formerly. In addition, with business syphoning off more than its share of Ph.D.'s, the professor is in a far stronger position to make demands. Thus the trend of the times and the teacher shortage indicate clearly that the college professor will become the "fair-haired" boy of the professions. Therefore, the college which attracts and holds an outstanding faculty must take a new look at its entire educational operation and find ways and means of awarding its faculty far beyond our current conceptions.

At Kalamazoo our levels compare quite favorably with those of other independent colleges. The recent state-wide study of higher education sponsored by the Michigan Legislature revealed that in 1957-58 the average salary of our teaching staff was the highest among the independent colleges of the State, though still woefully inadequate. There were, however, only two of the eleven tax-supported institutions below our median. Determined not to lag behind the national pattern, the Board of Trustees in June tore up faculty contracts and awarded double raises to our professors. To accomplish this, the Trustees necessarily levied a $50 tuition increase, with every dollar of the increase assigned to salaries. Consequently, our levels are now equal to the typical state college in Michigan and comparable to the better small colleges in the nation. We should remember, though, that this only lifts Kalamazoo to the current level in the most rapid salary advance which higher education has ever experienced.

With these facts in mind, let us examine the current problem. To pay higher salaries any independent college must secure more endowment, obtain a higher level of annual support, or keep tuition constantly rising to combat inflationary trends. While one might hope for a plethora of legacies which would sharply lift the endowment, we realistically know that the building of a financial backlog is a slow and arduous task. We must likewise realize that in annual giving there is a saturation point dependent upon the size and capacity of one's constituency. Thus we find ourselves with little alternative beyond that of hoping that our clientele will be able and willing to bear a larger share of the financial burden in order to maintain a quality faculty.

At this point we come face to face with our particular dichotomy. To attract the competent and well-prepared student, we have necessarily granted financial assistance to nearly 50% of our students. These young people are worthy of our investment and we are proud to have them in the College. Nonetheless, the College lacks the financial undergirding to support their scholarships. Consequently, both they and the College suffer—the students because all too many are extending themselves financially beyond their means, and the College because it must channel nearly $100,000 annually to scholarship awards.

Since salaries must move steadily ahead, there seems to be no alternative but to undertake an aggressive admissions program to enroll more superior students who can carry their share of the financial burden. Meanwhile, the College must enlist the monetary support of an increasing number of alumni and friends to keep our fees from becoming astronomical.

There is also a corollary to the problem. In a pragmatic age in which vocational training has dominated the minds of the typical educator, many teachers, parents, and students fail to understand the true purpose of the liberal education. As a result, all too many students enroll at Kalamazoo without sufficient understanding of or capacity for the broad liberal training which seeks to stimulate the mind rather than to prepare for a specific career. This leads to a higher rate of student attrition than we desire during upperclassman years. We must, therefore, enroll more students who appreciate the advantages of the

ON THE EVE OF THE CIVIL WAR

By Dr. Kendall B. Taft

In the academic year 1860-61, Lewis Amos Taft (1839-1868) of West Barre, Ohio, was a freshman at Kalamazoo College. He was a younger brother of the Reverend Howard Bailey Taft (1830-1911), who was a graduate of Kalamazoo College in the class of 1859 and for many years a member of the college board of trustees. Howard B. Taft was the father of four graduates of Kalamazoo: Miner C. Taft (1885), George Wheaton Taft (1886; D. D., 1915), Erwin B. Taft (1895), and Alice Taft Ashley (1902). On his death, at the age of twenty-nine,

Since 1945, Dr. Kendall B. Taft, above, class of 1920, has been professor of American literature and chairman of the department of English and speech at Roosevelt University in Chicago. After service in the First World War, he completed his undergraduate work at the State University of Iowa and took further degrees at Washington University (M.S., 1927) and the University of Chicago (Ph.D., 1936). His biography appears in "Who's Who in America." Lewis A. Taft, about whom the article is written, was the great-uncle of the author.

During much of his one year at Kalamazoo, Lewis Taft kept a diary, in which he painstakingly recorded his classroom and extracurricular activities, his day-to-day expenses, weather conditions, and, occasionally, his opinions of fellow students. His year at the college was also the year in which the Civil War began, so his diary entries give a series of personal, on-the-spot reactions to the exciting events of the troubled spring of 1861. Some of these entries, edited only enough to clarify Taft's abbreviated style (his personal shorthand, it might be called), are reproduced below.

Friday, February 1, 1861. Went to chapel in the morning (8:40). Found most of the old students there. Went to Geometry; did not recite. . . In evening went to hear Prof. White lecture — University of Michigan.

On this date, Taft had just returned from a vacation period, and a new college term was beginning. "Prof. White" was Amos Dickson White, for some years a teacher of history at the University of Michigan and later a distinguished president of Cornell University.

Saturday, February 2. Went to Rhetorical Exercises at College. Prof. did not come until Chapel time. After Chapel finished unpacking my trunk. Saw Adam & Eve (10¢). Went to two auctions.

At this time every student in the college took "rhetoricals" through each of his four years. The work consisted of both oral and written exercises (a forerunner of the modern course in communication?), and was directed by various members of the faculty. "Adam & Eve" were paintings by a French artist — widely exhibited in the United States.

Sunday, February 3. Cooked breakfast first time after return. Stayed to prayer-meeting ½ hour after Chapel. Went to Congregational Church . . . Stayed at my room in afternoon. Went to Missionary meeting in evening (good). Motion made that Missionary Committee or deputy should visit each member of college (for cash).

Taft roomed in the Upper College Building (later called the Men's Dormitory, and, still later, Williams Hall). He and his room mates shared the domestic chores, including preparation of meals. The room rent was $2.25 a quarter, including a 75¢ "incidentals" fee. This entry records a fairly typical Sunday's activities for the diarist.

Monday, February 4. Geometry changed from 3 p.m. to 11 a.m. Recited. Did not study much in afternoon. After supper went to Warren's room & had some nuts to eat.

Tuesday, February 5. Recited in Geometry, 11 a.m. Recited first. Prof. said we need not review, but take four problems in advance . . . Met at 4 p.m. to organize a Physiology class — lesson, first two chapters. In my room all evening.

Wednesday, February 6. Powell and Strong came in our room at noon; stayed an hour or so to bore us . . . Went to prayer meeting 6 p.m. at Chapel (good).

Saturday, February 9. Went to Rhetorical Exercises 7:40 a.m. . . Went down town 2 p.m. to see painting of Adam & Eve. Heard description of painting and two poems by the owners. Came back by washwoman's. Forgot to get some bread & had to cook supper.

Sunday, February 10. Prayer meeting at Chapel. Went to Baptist Church, heard E. F. Fish preach. Text, 2 Kings, 4:26. Went to Sunday School concert at Presbyterian Church (good). This was an annual concert — better than common.

Wednesday, February 13. Geometry recited at 11 a.m. . . Recited in Physiology, same as yesterday. Prof had a skeleton & exhibited it to the class.

Monday, February 25. . . . Mr. Perrin came to the Physiology class and left a lot of tickets for his Panorama. Prof. gave me fifty to sell; sold 13. I went to the Panorama. Very good.

Monday, March 4. Eames visited the boys in the College to raise money to get powder to celebrate A. Lincoln.

Up to this point in the diary, Taft's entries are concerned with the normal routine of his college life. On March 4, 1861, however, Abraham Lincoln was inaugurated as President. It was this event that Fred W. Eames, a senior in the preparatory department of the College, wanted to celebrate. South Carolina had seceded in December, 1860, and early in February, 1861, it and six other seceded states formed the Confederate States of America. War clouds were beginning to darken.

Saturday, March 16. . . . In evening, went to hear Grace Greenwood lecture.

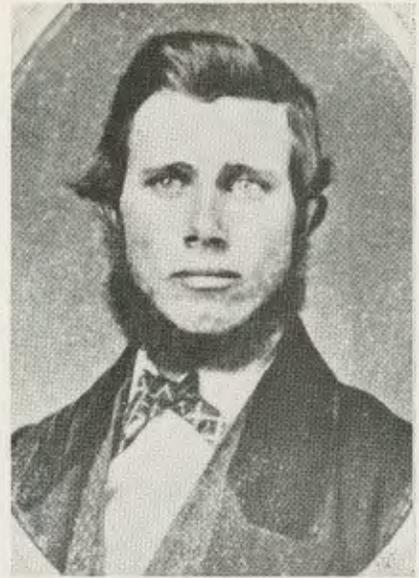

Grace Greenwood was the pen-name of Mrs. Sara Jane Lippincott, well known writer and lecturer in the middle of the nineteenth century.

Tuesday, March 26. Botany lesson, 4th chapter. Prof. said we would not try to learn all about Botany in the book, but by observation.

Sunday, April 14. . . . Did not have any Chapel. Went to the Baptist Church. S. Haskell preached. Text, Romans 13: 1-5 (War). (Good).

On April 12, Fort Sumter was fired on, and it surrendered on the day that the Reverend Mr. Haskell was expounding his text: "Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God."

Monday, April 15. . . . Eames was up here to get the students to enlist in the Lewis A. Taft, whose diary entries at Kalamazoo College during the time of the Civil War form the basis for this article, is shown above at the age of 25.

War. I hope he will succeed in his wild career.

This was the day that President Lincoln issued his call for 75,000 volunteers.

Tuesday, April 16. . . . Poor news from the South. Virginia and Kentucky going to secede. Jackson Grays offered their services.

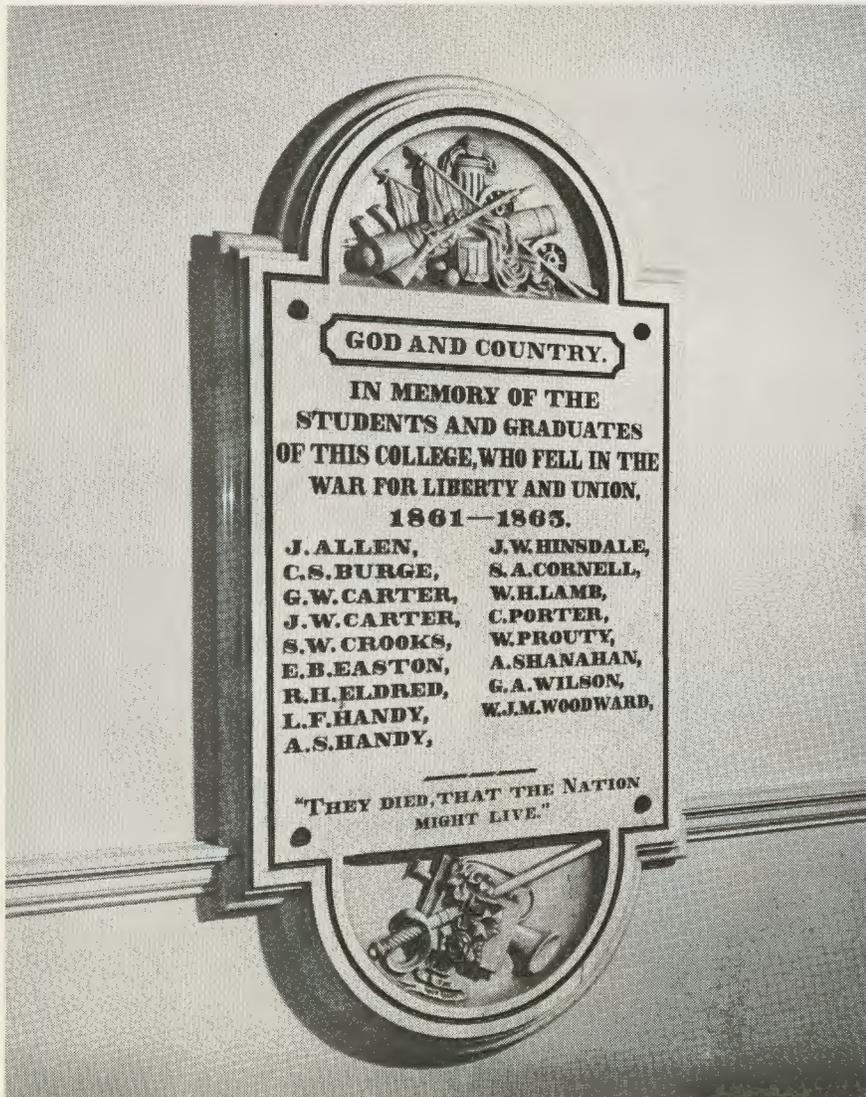

Virginia's secession was delayed for a few days, and, as we now know, Kentucky did not secede. The Jackson Grays was a militia company in Jackson, Michigan.

Thursday, April 18. . . . Good news from Virginia. Have not seceded yet.

Virginia had actually taken its principal steps on the way to secession on April 17, but the news — as often during the period — was confused or contradictory.

Friday, April 19. . . . At noon, the students marched (with oak brush for guns) over to the other Institution. Gave Eames 3 cheers twice.

SUMMER STUDY ABROAD

This summer, there were twenty-five Kalamazoo College students who had the extreme good fortune to study in Europe through the assistance of a scholarship program provided by the S. R. Light Trust. The program has established twenty-five grants of $500 each, and the first group of students to be so honored went abroad this past summer. No other college foreign study plan touches as many students with financial assistance. The students studied in France, Germany, and Spain. Taking courses at the University of Caen were Anne Colley, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Katheryn Edmonds, Kalamazoo; Mary Hanson, Flossmoor, Ill.; David Larson, Westfield, N. J.; Patricia Martin, Battle Creek; Gilbert Rogers, Muskegon; William Vincent, Kalamazoo; and Maija Zadins, Kalamazoo. Going to Spain and the University of Madrid were Mary Jo Dunkirk, Racine, Wis.; Marjorie Lewis, St. Joseph; and Mary Murch, Paw Paw. Those who studied at the University of Bonn were David Brown, Schoolcraft; Paul Carlton, Kalama-liberal tradition. These are the students most likely found in homes where the intellectual and cultural predominate; in the homes of college graduates; in professional homes; and above all else, in the homes of our alumni who understand our fellowship in learning.

We must face the stark reality of the present. An avalanche of change toward the professor—devoutly to be desired for years—is upon us. Should Kalamazoo drift haphazardly or gird its loins to meet the changing situation? The ultimate standing of the College will not be determined by bricks and mortar, but rather by the quality of our product. That product, in turn, will be determined by the calibre of professor who molds the minds of those who sit at his feet.

And your part in the unfolding drama? We want more of your sons and daughters. We want your recommendation of students from environments which can appreciate liberal tradition. Such students are most likely to come from the homes of your friends. Thus you have a part to play in the drama. In a year in which we have turned down more students than at any time in history, we urge your assistance in recommending qualified candidates who can be challenged by ideas.

Slide-showing parties, letters post-marked Deutschland, Espana, and France, sandals and lederhosen at Kalamazoo College attest to the existence of the S. R. Light Scholarships for European study. More important evidences of the success of this program lie with the Light travellers themselves, in their increased knowledge of European customs, governments, industries and outlooks, in their abilities to speak a foreign language, and in their new friendships with people of foreign lands. These are the goals which the Light Scholars sought to attain.

Last March, twenty-five of us learned that we would be the "guinea pigs" in a new program designed to promote mutual understanding between the peoples of the world. For the next three months we walked on air, but occasionally came down to earth for instruction in European manners, travel regulations, and other items of concern to "first-timers." We laughed over passport photos and fretted over "what to wear when."

In June, after our rounds of exams and hours of packing, we embarked on a summer-full of pleasure and seriousness, of learning and teaching, of making new friends and getting to know old ones much better. The ten day boat trip from Montreal, Canada to Le Havre, France, provided an opportunity for fellowship in new surroundings. We lazed on the top deck, pored over our Berlitzer books together, nursed each other through the flu and joined to cheer up Dr. Richard Stavig, our faculty adviser, when he fell prey to the ubiquitous bug. By the end of the trip we had established a never-to-be-lost comradeship.

We landed in LeHavre on June 27th and everyone immediately reacted in the same way — "They're speaking French!" The group that was to study in France left for Caen, while the rest of us continued on to Paris. There we parted company. Dr. Stavig accompanied one group to Madrid, and the other group headed for Bonn.

For the next two months the Light Scholars lived and studied in a new environment. In Germany we boarded with private families for the entire summer, and learned much about the ways of the people through mealtime discussions — all in German, of course — on many topics. In our studies at the University of Bonn we joined students from several continents, all of whom were interested in German life, language and literature. Much of the valuable course-work took place outside the classroom, at plays and concerts, on excursions through the nearby region and on steamer trips up the Rhine. Similar programs were in effect in France and Spain.

Perhaps the greatest delight of the summer was our growing facility with a foreign language. The first few days in Germany, most of us were afraid to say more than "ja" or "nein." After two weeks, however, we could carry on understandable, if slow, conversations, and by the end of the first month we had little trouble making purchases, securing services, and — most important of all — asking directions. Soon we were participating in class discussions on such subjects as philosophy, art and drama. With little more effort than merely keeping our ears open to the sounds around us we had grasped the language.

One of my most gratifying experiences with the German language occurred as I was walking home from school one day about three weeks after I had arrived in Bonn. Three bright-eyed little boys, about five or six years old, ran up to me and asked if I could direct them to a flower shop. They wanted to buy bouquets for their mothers. Somewhat charily I told them how to get to the nearest florist's — and they understood! I felt like I had received an "A" for the day.

We were always explaining things or having them explained. "How big is Kalamazoo?" they'd ask. "How big is Bonn?" we'd ask. "Do you like Elvis Presley?" "What do you think of Kruschew?" "Is it true that American men wash dishes?" Questions, questions, questions. We asked them and we answered them. We valued these questions highly because they embodied the real purpose of the S. R. Light Plan: mutuality of learning. We went to Europe not only to learn from them, but also to teach them that America's young people are like young people the world over . . . not much money, not much time to waste, but happy to lend a hand, easily adaptable, curious about their world, and anxious to help it through knowledge and friendship.

BROADENED OUTLOOK

By William Vincent '60

Those of us who were lucky enough to go to Europe this summer on the Light Scholarship Program have discovered that European study is an invaluable addition to our education.

At first glance, it would appear, as it did to most of us, that our enlightenment would be limited to the language and customs of the country in which we were to study. Instead we learned about Europe as a whole, and gathered experience not only in language and customs, but in history, geography, art, politics, and every other facet of life.

The French group, of which I was a member, studied at the University of Caen in Normandy. Enrolled in the summer course were students from twenty countries; from Lebanon to England; from Poland to Canada. We had contact with these people every day; we lived with them and ate with them. Above all, we talked with them. We learned about their ways of life; we found out what they felt about Russia and what they felt about the United States. We discussed such questions as Little Rock, Suez, Algeria, DeGaulle, Lebanon, Iraq, Red China, etc. All of the time, we were learning from them and they were learning from us. As a result, I think that all of us have become more tolerant and aware of all sides of world affairs.

Our classes were meant to teach us French, but they also gave us a good background in geography, history, and contemporary French literature. Three days a week, we went on excursions throughout Normandy. On these excursions, we tasted of history, architecture, industry, customs, and every other facet of French life. Whether it was the magnificent cathedral at Rouch, the chateau at Falaise, the beaches of Deauville, the military cemetery at Arromanches, the rugged coastline of Normandy, or the Abbey at Mont Saint-Michel, we were enthralled by the magnificence of Normandy.

As an added treat, there was a final five-day excursion through the chateau-studded Loire River Valley to Paris where we saw the palaces of Versailles and Fontainebleau and the great art in the Louvre.

This is what the French group did. The groups in Germany and Spain did much the same. After the courses were over, the students spread out all over Western Europe. Altogether, we hit Scotland, England, Austria, Switzerland, Italy, the Netherlands, and Belgium. Nearly everybody went to Brussels to see the condensed world at the Exposition.

Finally, we all sadly bade farewell to Europe and wearily climbed the gangplank for home. The summer was over, but, in reality, it wasn't over and never would be. Not one of us was the same as when he went. We knew as we sailed across the Atlantic, that we would have many things as part of the legacy from the summer: memories; pictures; language proficiency; friends in many countries; new attitudes and knowledge; and, most important, a broadened outlook for future life.

Among other Kalamazoo College students who went abroad was Robert Renk, upper picture, who was awarded the Winifred Dewing Wallace scholarship in English. He spent the summer at the Shakespeare Institute of the University of Birmingham, Stratford-on-Avon, England.

Grace Hayes, pictured at the Brussels Fair, was one of ten Michigan college students to be selected as a guide at the Fair.

David MacLeod was selected in Kalamazoo to accompany an exhibit, "Kalamazoo and How It Grew," as it toured England. Kalamazoo was judged the typical American city for the display, prepared by USIS. Present for its opening in Britain were Glenn Allen '36, mayor of Kalamazoo, and Dan Ryan '41, feature editor of the "Gazette."

THE 125th AND THE 19th

The total on the 125th Anniversary Fund has soared to $1,621,130, which is $29,130 beyond the goal. Altogether, 1893 individuals or companies have contributed. The alumni donors represent 40.5% of the alumni association.

Names of the donors to the 125th Anniversary Fund will be placed in a special book which will have a place of prominence on the campus. In addition to the list in the final Fund Newsletter, gifts of anniversary shares or more have been subscribed by Paul E. Wallendorf, the Kalamazoo Creamery, Harry Harris, the Helen Newberry Joy Fund, Berdena Rust, E. N. Grantvedt, Joel Pearson, Albert T. Huizinga, Morlan J. Grandbois, Walter Tatum, Mr. and Mrs. Donal B. Staake, Mrs. Harold P. Connable, Arlene H. Bates, and Robert Van Blarcom (Johnson-Howard Lumber Company).

Organizational work has been completed for the 19th Annual Fund, and the kickoff for the General and Alumni Division will be held on November 11. The goal is $80,000, which sum is needed to balance the operating costs of the current academic year. The 19th Annual Fund is headed by Albert VanZoeren '23, former president of the Alumni Association, as general chairman. Co-chairman for the Fund is Timothy Meulenberg '28. The Advance Gifts Division is chaired by William J. Lawrence '41, with Dan Ryan '42 as co-chairman. Dr. Richard Walker '41 heads the Alumni and General Division with Eleanor Born Grabarek '49 and Rita Metzger Plantefaber '49.

The College will be grateful for whatever part you can play to help reach the $80,000 goal, for indeed, the Anniversary Fund can be termed a complete success only if the 19th Annual Fund in its pattern of yearly support continues to meet its goal.

CAMPUS NEWS

A total of 245 new students enrolled at Kalamazoo College this fall, 225 of which were freshmen. The full enrollment is 637 students.

Dr. Kurt D. Kaufman of the department of chemistry at Kalamazoo College has received a three-year grant of $12,000 from the National Science Foundation for the study of furcoumarins.

The new practice and intramural field adjacent to and northwest of Angell Field, was dedicated on September 27. It has been named MacKenzie Field, in honor of Clark W. Mackenzie, long-time friend of Kalamazoo College.

The 43rd National Junior and Boys Tennis Championships were held at Stowe Stadium from July 28 to August 4. Rolla Anderson was director of the event which enrolled 255 tennis hopefuls. Clark Graebner of Lakewood, Ohio, won the boys' crown, and Earl Buchholz of St. Louis was the junior champion.

Dr. Sherrill Cleland, head of the department of economics and business administration, has undertaken a quarterly report, "Business Conditions in Kalamazoo," in cooperation with the W. E. Upjohn Institute for Community Research. The first issue was published in October.

The traditional Christmas Carol Service has been set for the date of December 14.

The Kalamazoo Symphony sponsored a fair in Bronson Park on September 20 in which the Eurodelphian Gamma Society took part. The Euros had a doll house booth and sold wares which included dolls and doll clothes made by both the members of the campus society and its alumnae.

A wire received from Dr. and Mrs. L. J. Hemmes on Homecoming Day read, "Greetings to the College and alumni. Wish we could be with you at this time. Thanks for everything."

CIVIL WAR

The "other Institution" was apparently the Lower (or Kalamazoo) Hall, which, until 1868, housed the "Female Department"—the women's division of the college.

Saturday, April 20. . . . Rhetoric was spirited. After Rhetoric went 2 miles to get a pole. Put it up between 2 & 4 o'clock. (Pole white wood 44 ft. long.) Had to take it up on the outside of the College. Raised money to get flag (me, 25¢). Went down town. . . . Light Guards training. Several of the boys (10) enlisted under Dwight May as captain. . . . Baltimore on fire. EXCITEMENT HERE ALL DAY.

Sunday, April 21. Washington reported on fire, then disputed. Spirit of boys rising. Prayer meeting after Chapel (good). Baptist Church, S. Haskell preached. Text, Hebrews 12:26 to end of chapter (good). More boys made up their minds to enlist.

Monday, April 22. A good many more boys enlisted (25 in all) & I thought pretty seriously of it. Took down pole to fix flag cord. I rang the bell for Chapel. After Chapel, Alexander for Profs. O., P., & H. made speeches—felt bad about the boys going. Botany 5 boys and 5 girls present. No Physiology nor Surveying. Executive Committee met. Prof. Anderson spoke at evening Chapel. Thought boys had acted without thinking.

As the preceding entries show, the work of the college was now seriously, although not entirely, disrupted. Note that there were two chapel meetings on the 22nd, and that the faculty was gravely concerned about the wholesale enlistments. "Profs. O., P., & H." were Edward Olney, professor of Mathematics, Theodor R. Palmer, professor of Latin, and Liberty E. Holden, professor of Rhetoric. Edward C. Anderson was professor of Greek.

Tuesday, April 23. Ran up the new flag. Prof. Anderson spoke about getting up a training company here at College. Wanted to discourage the boys. Prof. Anderson led in Chapel. 23 students, 24 in all, in Chapel in evening. Quick said he was going to go, tonight. . . . Went down town. Saw boys that have enlisted. Looked pretty sober.

A total of 223 students, in all departments, were enrolled in the college in 1860-61. Hence the significance of the chapel attendance of 23.

Wednesday, April 24. [Some of the boys] have backed out. Botany class did not recite. Prof. said we would not recite again until Friday . . . Saw Light Guards train from window. Physiology did not recite. Prof. Palmer only one at Chapel. Spoke as if he thought the boys would not be accepted.

Friday, April 26. . . . News came that Captain May's company was accepted. Looks doubtful about the school going on.

Saturday, April 27. Nine students in all in Rhetorical Exercises; 3 Profs. — Anderson, Palmer, & Holden . . . Went down town . . . . News came they [May's company] will start April 30. Sunday, April 28. . . . Not as much excitement here as last Sabbath.

Monday, April 29. . . . Prayer & conference meeting in Chapel. All of the students that are going to go as soldiers gave us a farewell speech. Kilpatrick said that he was not afraid that he would die, but if he did he was prepared.

Tuesday, April 30. . . . Went down town 10:30 to bid my brother students goodbye & see them start. Received a letter from home asking me to come home. (Going.)

Wednesday, May 1. Got excused before Chapel from Prof. Anderson & after Chapter from Prof. Olney. Did not like to have me go . . . . Went down town 9:30 — saw old men march. Fisher carried a musket.

The following day Lewis Taft left for his home at West Barre, near Wauseon, Ohio. He did not return to Kalamazoo College, but for several months worked on his father's farm. In continuing diary entries he several times expressed his desire to enlist — a desire that he fulfilled in the summer of 1862, when he was stationed with the 85th Ohio Regiment at Camp Chase, near Columbus.

SPEAKING OF BOOKS

By Dr. Arnold Mulder

When the President of the United States holds a news conference and gives respectful attention to the questions of the reporters, few, even of those who take part, may remember that this state of affairs is the result of more than two centuries of the newspapers' battle for the right of the people to know. In our day the Supreme Court is almost the only institution in government that looks down its nose at the press; the executive and legislative departments provide every facility they can think of to make reporting easy for representatives of the papers.

As late as in the middle of the eighteenth century, not much more than 200 years ago, British statesmen regarded the newspapers as a nuisance, and Parliament held that the press had no rights whatsoever.

In a book called Johnson's England, a description of English institutions in the eighteenth century, I came across a curious attack on the press. Parliament, by formal resolution, declared that all reports should be excluded from the public sessions and that any paper that printed reports of the parliamentary debates should be severely punished.

In the quaint diction of the eighteenth century, Parliament decreed:

"It is a high indignity to and a notorious breach of the privileges of this House, for any News-Writer, in Letters, or other Papers (as Minutes, or under any other denomination), or for any Printer or Publisher of any printed News-Paper of any denomination, to presume to insert in the said Letters or Papers, or to give therein any account of the Debates or other Proceedings, of this House, or any Committee thereof, as well during the recess, as the Sitting of Parliament; and that this House will proceed with utmost severity against such offenders."

In twentieth century English, any newspaper that published a report of what was said or done at any session of Parliament would be fined and its editor would be placed behind the bars or put in the pillory. Daniel Defoe, of Robinson Crusoe fame, an early editor, was in fact both placed in the pillory and put in prison.

The newspapers fought this early denial of the people's right to know from the very start. When reporters were not allowed in the gallery of Parliament as reporters, the papers hired writers with good memories to attend the sessions. They were not permitted to take notes, but they committed to memory the points made by the politicians in the debates. Then they would go to the office and write the speeches as best they could from memory.

Samuel Johnson, the great eighteenth century writer whose books today's college students read reverently as British classics, carried the process a step further. He did not even attend the Parliamentary sessions or listen to the speeches he reported. As a super-"ghost"-writer he was centuries ahead of those who write the speeches of the statesmen of today. In his book, The Achievement of Samuel Johnson, Professor Walter Jackson Bates describes Johnson's technique:

"The proceedings of the Commons were not at this time recorded or allowed to be reported. Abridged accounts, however, were occasionally published when the House was in recess. In time, the Gentleman's Magazine began publishing what were assumed to be rather full reports. For two years (1741-43) Johnson was their sole author, with hardly any information given him except the subject of the debate, the names of the speakers, the order in which they appeared, and an indication of the arguments used. Yet these debates, 'the mere coinage of his own imagination,' were written with astonishing speed — three printed columns in an hour, according to John Nichols, and 'faster than most persons could have transcribed that quantity.' Many years later, the reports were still generally accepted as true."

Some of the major statesmen of Johnson's time live today in the history of British eloquence largely because a newspaper writer of genius attributed speeches to them that they were too unskilled to write themselves. In view of the growing system of "ghost" writing, some twentieth century statesmen are doubtless winning reputations in oral belles-lettres in a similar way.

SPORTS

By Dick Kishpaugh

Only four seniors competed on Kalamazoo College's 1958 football team, giving the Hornets a solid group of underclassmen to return in 1959. The four seniors are (left to right in above picture) Don Steffen, John Gaynor, Dan Gibson, and Lou Vild. Senior Bob Urschaltz was unable to compete because of an injury. Gibson acted as playing captain after Urschaltz, the captain-elect, was sidelined.

Kalamazoo's 1958 football team ran into more than its share of tough luck as early-season injuries turned out to be a major problem. As a result, the Hornets lost their first five games in a row, the longest Kalamazoo losing streak in several seasons.

Only once in those five games did the Hornets have a chance for victory in the game. This was against Alma, when Kalamazoo had a scoring chance on the Scot four-yard line in the final period. But Alma stopped the Hornets at that point and went on to score a narrow 17-14 victory. Kalamazoo also lost to Ohio Wesleyan, 35-20, and to Beloit, 25-0, in non-league contests, and to Hope and Albion by identical 27-0 scores in MIAA games.

Every football team expects to have a few players sidelined for brief periods of time during the season, but Kalamazoo's situation was unusually bad. Before the season even started, star quarterback and captain Bob Urschaltz was lost for the entire season with a knee injury. At one time or another during the first four games of the year, the Hornets were missing both starting tackles and both starting guards. Three different players were pressed into action at center, and, in the first five games, Coach Rolla Anderson was forced to start five different backfield combinations.

Still, the Hornets were not lacking spirit, and the series of defeats failed to dampen their enthusiasm. Looking ahead to other seasons, there is optimism to be found in the fact that there were only four seniors on the entire squad (not counting Urschaltz, who unfortunately was not able to compete at all). Also, the talent and quantity of the freshman group was above average, and several first-year players moved into key positions.

In cross-country, the situation is much brighter, as the Hornets have enjoyed a successful season. At press time of this magazine, Kalamazoo and Calvin have both beaten Albion's perennial champions, and the Hornets in turn have a chance to take a share of the title by winning the MIAA run at Hillsdale on November 12. This would be possible despite the fact that Calvin defeated Kalamazoo in a dual meet.

Basketball is now getting underway, and prospects for a winning season are bright. Four regulars return — John Thompson, Bob Fletcher, Bob Brice, and Walt Maser — and Coach Ray Steffen is hopeful that the Hornets can once again finish among the leaders. Chances for a MIAA title, however, are dimmed by the fact that Hope's defending champions will have their starting lineup returning intact.

The 1958-59 basketball schedule includes some unusual features. Rather than a Holiday Tournament as in past seasons, the Hornets will join Albion in a series of games against non-league opponents Wooster and Manchester. Two games will be played at Kalamazoo and two at Albion as the two MIAA teams play Wooster and Manchester.

Late in January, the team will take a two-game trip to meet Kenyon at Gambier, Ohio, and Earlham at Richmond, Indiana. Lawrence Tech will play at Kalamazoo in one of the featured non-league games.

ALUMNI NOTES

Clubs

The Kalamazoo Area Alumni Club, by mail ballot, elected as its president, Dr. Richard A. Walker '41, Kalamazoo dentist. Also named to office were Neil K. Plantefaber '47, assistant to the president and sales manager of the Kalamazoo Container Company, as the Club's vice president; and Mrs. Robert Jahnson (Betty Shayman '45), secretary-treasurer.

The Executive Committee of the Kalamazoo College Alumni Association, husbands and wives, met for a potluck dinner at the home of the president, Mrs. H. Loree Harvey (Lois Stutzman '29) on July 29. Following the dinner, the group worked on program plans for the coming year.

The Lansing Alumni Club held a "fall roundup" on October 3 at the home of Mr. '35 and Mrs. Allen Hayes (Ruth Demme '37). Mrs. Hayes is the Lansing Club president.

The Ann Arbor Alumni Club held an open house on Sunday afternoon, October 19, at the home of Dr. Burton Baker '33. Over forty alumni attended the affair. An election of officers named Dr. John C. Ayers '34 to succeed Dr. Baker as president. Also elected was Charlotte Hardy '35 as secretary.

For the records, Lois Stutzman Harvey '29 is the fourth woman to head the Kalamazoo College Alumni Association. Her predecessors include Agnes Grenell Goss '12 who served in 1916; Margaret Boyden Olmsted '03, president in 1919; and Elizabeth Stetson Fleugel '17, president in 1928.

Deaths

Edgar R. Young '03 died on July 30 in Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, while on a southern vacation trip with his son and family. He was a resident of Jackson, Michigan. Mr. Young had been district agent of the Southwestern Michigan general agency, Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company for 55 years, having been associated with the company since he was graduated from Kalamazoo College. On January 1, 1957, he retired as district agent and was named agent emeritus by the firm. Mr. Young was a member of the Board of Trustees of Kalamazoo College, president of the Jackson Chamber of Commerce, and city commissioner and vice-mayor of Jackson. Mr. Young served as chairman of the Jackson Memorial Camp for Children, was a member of the Jackson County Humane Society and was a director of the Michigan Federation of Humane Societies. He was a charter member of the Kiwanis Club and served on the board of advisors to the Salvation Army. He was one of the founders of the Hotel Hayes, the Jackson Riding Club, and the Country Club of Jackson. He is survived by his son, Paul.

Dr. Robert E. Angell '12 died at his home in St. Petersburg, Florida, on September 27. Dr. Angell was a chiropractor and had been practicing in St. Petersburg since 1929. He taught school for several years before taking his chiropractic schooling. Dr. Angell received his M.S. from the University of Michigan in 1913, as the holder of the first state fellowship awarded by the University of Michigan to Kalamazoo College. Among his survivors are his wife, a son and a daughter, and four grandchildren.

Nelson J. Elwood '12 died on July 21 in Gary, Indiana, after having been found beaten and robbed on a Gary street the previous night. Mr. Elwood was township clerk of Comstock Township, near Kalamazoo, and farmed the 115 year-old family homestead. Mr. Elwood was active in the local Democratic Party. He is survived by his sister, Maude '22, and a brother, Millard.

Dr. Henry Cole Parker '15 died at his home in Washington, D. C., after a long illness. Dr. Parker was a patent attorney and research chemist who practiced law in Washington for 30 years before his retirement. During World War I, Dr. Parker worked on rockets with the late Dr. Robert Goddard, celebrated father of modern rocketry. He was a member of Sigma Xi, honorary scientific society, and belonged to the American Chemical Society, the American Institute of Chemical Engineers, the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the American Patent Law Association. In connection with his hobby of flowers, Dr. Parker was a member of the American Dahlia Society and the National Capital Dahlia Society. He is survived by his wife and a sister, Margaret Ingham '12.

Lindsey R. Goss '16 was found dead at his home in Kalamazoo on October 11. He was associated in the furniture and mortuary business with his father for ten years until he enrolled in Kalamazoo College. While in College he established the Goss Furniture Company in Kalamazoo, which he operated until 1939. From 1946 until his retirement in 1956, he was proprietor of a sports shop. He is survived by his wife, the former Agnes Grenell '12; two daughters, Inez Goss Calcerano '47 and Louise '48; one brother and three sisters, one of whom is Ruth Goss Eldridge '17.

Ruth White Ralston '18 died on July 15 in Kalamazoo following a three-week illness.

Mrs. Ralston devoted her life to philanthropies and to civic endeavors. She was a member of the First Methodist Church, was a past president of the Women's Society for Christian Service, and was serving as secretary of the Michigan Conference for Student Work in the Methodist Church. She was a past president of the Women's Council of Kalamazoo College, of the Fine Arts Club, and of the Nurses Supply Club. She was a member of the Alumni Council and served as class agent for the class of 1918. Surviving are her husband, Ralph M. '16, three daughters, Mrs. Warren E. (Susan) Louis '53, Mrs. James R. (Jean) Mitchell, Mrs. Bruce E. (Phyllis) Corey '46, and one son, James W. Friends are contributing toward furnishings in the lounge of the new women's dormitory, as a memorial to Mrs. Ralston.

Kensell B. Williams of the class of 1921, died at his home in Reno, Nevada, on April 24. He was the son of Clark B. Williams, a former dean of Kalamazoo College. Among his survivors are his wife, two sons and a daughter.

Dorothy Dye Buckley '29 died on July 5 in Kalamazoo. She was librarian of the Kalamazoo Public Library until her marriage to Edwin Buckley '31. Survivors include her mother, her husband, and one son.
