The Pauline Byrd Johnson Award
don behalf of the Faculty of Kalamazoo College, I am delighted to present to you Diane E. Bishop, the 1996 Pauline Byrd Johnson Award for excellence in secondary education. It gives me great pleasure that this award goes to a high school teacher who is so highly regarded by her students and her colleagues.

Diane Bishop is a distinguished teacher of the English language and British, American, and World Literature at Msgr. John R. Hackett Catholic High School in Kalamazoo, a school that has produced a great number of Kalamazoo College students. We often lose sight of the instrumental role that high school teachers play in the lives of our students. Diane Bishop's influence demonstrates clearly the profound impact teachers have in promoting standards of excellence.

Diane Bishop completed both her B.A. in English and French and her M.A. in Reading at Western Michigan University. She has taught for 27 years at Msgr. O'Brien and Msgr. Hackett High Schools. During the 27 years of her teaching career, she also served as Head of the English Department, Chair of the Academic Council, and Co-chair of the North Central Association Accreditation Committee. She has edited the school literary magazine and was involved in the restructuring of her school's governance. Three times she has been chosen by seniors as their graduation speaker, an honor only bestowed upon the best and most highly admired faculty. Also three times, she has been chosen as a "Significant Educator" by the salutatorians and valedictorians. Above all, Ms. Bishop encourages her students to "question in the right way," to think logically and certainly before you speak, to write and speak well, and to instill curiosity in her students. She insists upon the applicability of literary study; invariably her students comment on the outstanding job she did in preparing them for college work, especially in writing, literary analysis, and logical thinking.

Diane Bishop strives to instill confidence in students using the Socratic method in order to encourage students to express their own ideas. As a teacher, Ms. Bishop thoroughly enjoys her students and her work in the high school and would not want to change this for any other level of teaching.

Diane Bishop is a most significant educator, indeed. We offer our heartfelt congratulations and gratitude to her today. Now, to her other fine distinctions, Kalamazoo College is proud to add the Pauline Byrd Johnson Award. We hereby extend our fondest hope that our students and others will be inspired by her example to heed the noble and valued calling of secondary school teaching.
