Dr. Bacon Dies At 96

Dr. Justin H. Bacon, 96-year-old professor emeritus of French and the College's first registrar, died on February 2 at Bronson Hospital where he had been hospitalized after being struck by a car on November 22.

Dr. Bacon was born into a pioneering New England family in Putney, Vermont, June 17, 1873. He received a bachelor's degree from Brown University in 1896 and his master's degree, also from Brown, in 1897. On Christmas day, 1900, Dr. Bacon married Addie M. Lebroueau.

Dr. Bacon joined the Kalamazoo College faculty in the fall of 1907 as a French instructor and later also taught German. His duties as registrar began in 1918. In addition, Dr. Bacon was secretary of the faculty for many years, and he helped to develop the College's athletic program and served from 1911 to 1931 as a representative to the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

During Kalamazoo College's centennial celebration in 1933, he was awarded an honorary degree of Litt.D. He was honored by the Kalamazoo College Emeritus Club in June, 1966.

Dr. Bacon's wife preceded him in death in 1960. Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Bert Cooper (Charlotte '30) and Marjorie '28; three grandsons and six great grandchildren. Family and friends have established a Justin H. Bacon Memorial Scholarship Fund at Kalamazoo College.

Students of Dr. Bacon will appreciate this excerpt from the memorial service conducted by the Reverend Albert C. Pittman of the Kalamazoo First Baptist Church:

"Last year, Dr. Bacon told me he had decided not to come to Sunday church services anymore. His decision was based on several experiences of fainting in church and having to be carried out. I told him I could understand his apprehension and embarrassment; I was about to add that I thought it was a sensible decision. But he interrupted me. He cocked his head and, looking at me squarely with that gaze which had brought to heel generations of students, fellow professors, and even college presidents, said: 'It doesn't bother me! It's other people in the church who get frightened and embarrassed.' He paused. Then, he added: 'I rather enjoyed the excitement!'

'I doubt if Justin Bacon was ever overwhelmed or embarrassed by the events of life. In his walk and speech, in the keenness of his mind and the sparkle of his eyes one could sense a strength and a grace which were never intimidated, a strength and a grace so often experienced in those green mountains of Vermont where he was born and reared ...

'I wish I could have known him in earlier days when he was in his prime. For his latter days of strength, confidence, and humor did not just happen. They were nourished by the growing convictions and character of former years. The spirit of the younger Justin shaped the spirit of the older Justin in such a way that 'till the very last he was expectant and lovingly contending with life.'

Hey, White Girl

Susan Gregory, a Kalamazoo College junior from the Chicago area, is achieving national acclaim for her new book, Hey, White Girl.

Sue, who lived most of her life in Wilmette, Illinois, an affluent northern suburb of Chicago, spent her senior year of high school at John Marshall High in the heart of Chicago's west side ghetto. She had completed her junior year at New Trier High in Winnetka, a school of 5000 students almost all white, known for its high academic standing.

Hey, White Girl is a highly personal account of her senior year at the all black inner city school where she was the only white student. The book was written, says Sue, because "I feel a responsi-

Bachward Society

The Bachward Society at Kalamazoo College is a unique musical organization and is winning recognition for its quality in performance.

The group, now numbering 53, is composed and operated solely by college students with a common interest — music — especially the works of the great early masters like Bach, Handel, and Mozart. Although the name, Bachward Society, originated as a pun, the group has rapidly achieved the reputation as a campus organization with merit.

Last year, Calvert Johnson, at that time a sophomore, from Denver, Colorado, brought together a small group of musicians for a performance of a Handel organ concerto. The group clicked and decided to band together and specialize in the works of baroque and classical composers, and especially to perform them in the original settings and moods. Although many of the members are not music majors, they share a love for music, and all perform well, either vocally or with an instrument. The group is on call to area churches and is scheduled this winter to perform in churches in Detroit, Flint and Battle Creek. Numerous appearances are made on campus and, for the last two years, members have won in the Youth Auditions for the Bach Festival. Two major performances are planned for spring: the opera "Dido and Aeneas" and a performance of Mozart's "Horn Concerto No. 3."

Students currently serving as coordinators for the group are Miss Dana Campbell, senior from Weston, Connecticut, Alan Paddle, a Detroit sophomore, and Michael Leib, a Flint senior.

Puppetry Seminar

Puppetry is part of a newly-initiated program of freshman seminars, now used in the English, philosophy, and theatre arts departments. The Puppetry Seminar was introduced this quarter by first-year faculty member, Larry Gamble, who sees it as having four major goals: to cultivate and then channel creative energies, to introduce puppetry as an art form and to study the techniques involved, to cultivate creativity in a group as opposed to the stereotype of the solitary artist, and to learn to understand one's audience. In the photograph are Kevin Fetch, Three Rivers; Jane Adams, Wayzata, Minn.; Peggy Maass, Birmingham, Mich.; and Mr. Gamble.

Why Kalamazoo is so Reasonably Priced

The typical small college is finding educational costs mounting much more rapidly than it would prefer. Because of a chain of fortunate circumstances, Kalamazoo College is currently priced at least $300 below comparable institutions.

Why is Kalamazoo College able to offer an education of recognized quality at a more reasonable figure?

First, our year-around program makes possible sizable savings which are handed along to students. A majority of colleges operate on a typical college year in which their facilities stand unused or inefficiently used during the summer. In contrast, Kalamazoo has a full summer quarter with a substantial percentage of its students on campus for that session. Thus the College has been able to enroll a larger number of students without a commensurate increase of its plant. This means more efficient operation which saves money.

Second, the College is fortunate in having a larger endowment per student than most comparable educational institutions. Alumni, the Kalamazoo community, and friends of the College across the country have, for thirty years, generously supported the College's Annual Fund. This fund is devoted almost entirely to underwriting current operating expenses and thus helps keep the cost of an education at Kalamazoo more moderate.

Third, the College has no indebtedness. In the last decade in which educational institutions have been expanding, the typical American college or university has been amortizing the construction of new buildings so that they are financed on borrowed money. This means that each student body must pay off a portion of the indebtedness and must carry the interest for the loans. In the last decade Kalamazoo has built or enlarged some 16 buildings, all of which were paid for with cash. This means that our charges to the student can be lower.

Fourth, our $19,000,000 campus, complete in every respect, is situated in an urban environment on a fairly compact tract of land. Our total plant is built on less than 60 acres while the majority of colleges in more pastoral areas have campuses of much greater size. Our compact campus sharply reduces the cost of maintenance and upkeep and the savings are reflected in charges to students.

Fifth and finally, Kalamazoo concentrates entirely in undergraduate liberal arts education. The expensive facet of higher education comes through masters and doctorate programs. It comes, too, when a college departs from the liberal arts concept and builds a curriculum which runs the gamut of disciplinary possibilities. At Kalamazoo, our objective is liberal education. Our curriculum is shaped to accomplish this objective which in turn enables us to reduce educational costs while in fact increasing educational quality.

Planning Committee Named

Kalamazoo College President Weimer K. Hicks has announced the establishment of a College Planning Committee made up of trustees, faculty members, and administrators.

Smith '39, vice-president of the American National Bank in Kalamazoo; and Edward P. Thompson '43, a member of the Kalamazoo law firm of Fox, Thompson, and Morris.

Sports
by Dick Kishpaugh

An unusually cold Michigan winter has given Kalamazoo College's athletes good reason to look forward to the 1970 spring sports season. Members of the tennis, baseball, and golf teams are particularly anxious for the start of the southern trips which will take them to the sunny southland during the latter part of March.

One new head coach will make his debut in the spring, as Hank Harper takes over the track team. Hank came to Kalamazoo in the fall of 1969 and has been an assistant in both football and basketball. The track team, while not involved with the southern trips, will be active in March with trips to the Great Lakes Colleges meet at Denison University and to an indoor triangular meet at Big Rapids against Ferris and Albion. In past years, the track team hasn't had any formal competition until the outdoor season in mid-April.

Coach George Acker's tennis team will take the longest spring trip, going as far south as Miami, Florida, for several matches. The tennis group will leave on March 19 and will be back in Kalamazoo on March 28. Enroute to Florida, there will be dual meets against such strong opponents as Vanderbilt, University of the South, and Oglethorpe. At Miami, the opposition will be even stronger with matches against Southern Illinois, Miami, and Georgia Tech. Florida State, one of the nation's top teams, will be met in a dual meet on the return trip.

Ray Steffen's baseball team and the golfers of Coach Rolla Anderson will travel together on their trip south, and they will be away from the campus from March 19 to March 28, the same time period covered by the tennis trip.

The baseball and golf destination will be the area near Mobile, Alabama, and Pensacola, Florida. The University of Southern Alabama and Pensacola Navy are the principal baseball opponents in that area, with at least two games against each of those opponents. Ripon, from Wisconsin, will also be competing at Pensacola, and the Hornets will meet Ripon in the final game there, before heading north. Two games are scheduled against Birmingham Southern at Birmingham on the return trip.

The golf team will have only one or two formal matches, but will play as many practice rounds as possible on courses in the Mobile-Pensacola area.

The regular season for all four spring sports teams will begin in mid-April, and will end with the MIAA Field Day weekend on May 15-16. Kalamazoo will be the host for the 1970 MIAA Field Day, with track scheduled at Angell Field, tennis at Stowe Stadium, and golf at a Kalamazoo area course.

Southern Schedule

March 19 Tennis at Vanderbilt, 2:00 p.m.
March 20 Tennis at Univ. of the South, 2:00 p.m.
March 21 Baseball at Univ. of Southern Alabama, 1:00 p.m.
