The scene of the play is laid in Mrs. Baxter's sitting-room in a house twenty or thirty miles from London.

_The Mollusc_, generally considered to be the most brilliant comedy of the well known English dramatist Hubert Henry Davies, is a remarkable study of the character of a woman. The author places under our observation an exceedingly familiar form of female parasite, which he chooses to call a mollusc—a sort of shell-fish that clings tenaciously to rocks. The best known production of this play was one which featured George Arliss and Emily Stevens.

ACT I. Evening—after dinner.

ACT II. The following morning.

ACT III. One week later.

The Drama Club takes great pride in presenting for the first time the Kalamazoo College orchestra under the direction of Mr. Willis Dunbar.

Five such concerts will be given, one each month, throughout the winter, featuring the college musical organizations and a number of individuals of exceptional talent. No admission is charged but a box at the door will invite you to contribute whatever you may choose to the support of the college musical interests.
