

sections, I have only made reference to chapter numbers in the outline of folders. Where translations exist, the most finished version is filed first, followed by drafts, and finally reading notes.

The subseries "Topics" contains notes on Hartmann's thinking on particular subjects, bringing together comments from all of his works. Again, the folder titles were suggested by those used by Hemmes.

A third subseries is entitled "Miscellaneous," and contains two items. The first is a file box containing notecards on Hartmann. The majority have some type of topical heading, but seem to be in no coherent order. The second item is a study diary for Aug, 1958, to July, 1964. This diary contains notations of Hemmes' readings in Hartmann, along with a minimal amount of commentary.

These papers on Hartmann are potentially quite useful. While Hartmann is not well known in this country, he has been influential in Europe. A student of the history of contemporary philosophy would surely be interested in this influence and by the fact that Hartmann's reaction against the neo-Kantianism of his teachers (Cohen and Natorp) did not lead him to existentialism. In particular, Hartmann's axiology (in Ethik) was one of the first full executions of this anti-formalist plan. Perhaps one reason for Hartmann's obscurity in this country is the lack of English translations. In this respect, Hemmes' translation of Teleologisches Denken and his commentary on Asthetik should be especially helpful, although I would recommend that anyone thinking of seriously studying either Hartmann or Hemmes' notes have a strong background in German. Some of the notes in the "Topics" subseries are especially useful, as they bring together Hartmann's comments on a subject from many different works.

Series II: History and Movements of Philosophy

This series is arranged in roughly chronological order, being broken down into the main periods of the history of philosophy (ancient, medieval, modern) and the main movements within modern philosophy. Of course, since so many of these movements overlap, or coexist, no strict chronology is possible. The bulk of the material consists of lecture notes, along with some papers and reading notes.

Collection Luike J. Hemmes Papers
Scope & Content Series III: Branches of Philosophy

The eight main topics of this series were suggested by large groups of folders found within the entire collection. Each topic is subdivided into titles found either on the original folders or on large groups of notes. The order in which sub-topics would have been covered by Hemmes in a class on the main topic has been the guiding principle in arranging the folders; this is especially true of aesthetics and ethics. The material in these folders is almost entirely lecture notes.

Title
Collection Luike J. Hemmes Papers
Scope & Content Series IV: Philosophers

This series contains material on individual philosophers and their thought. The material divides fairly evenly between lectures presenting an overview of a certain philosophy, and reading notes on specific works. There are also a number of papers. As is also true of Series II and III, there is little original material to be found among these papers. A great deal of cross-referencing could be done between these three series (II, III, and IV); one would be well-advised, therefore, to consult the relevant topics in the other two series whenever referring to a subject from this group.

Luike J. Hemmes Papers

Scope & Content

Series V: Personal Papers

This series is divided into nine subseries. The first subseries contains letters, all of which have been numbered in the upper right-hand corner to facilitate reference and help keep them in order. The letters are divided into ten groups, according to the date, the sender, and the receiver. The first four groups are self-explanatory and arranged in strict chronological order. The fifth and sixth groups contain letters from the family prior to WWII. The division between these groups occurs when Hemmes' mother, Anna, and sister, Titi, return to Germany. These letters are not in strictly chronological order, because many were not sent directly to Hemmes. The letters from Germany were usually sent to the family in Chicago, who then forwarded them to Hemmes, along with a letter of their own. Since the cover letters often make reference to the content of the enclosed letters, it seemed necessary to keep these letters together. Thus, although the cover letters are in chronological order, enclosed letters may not be. Register sheets in the first folder of each group indicate which letters arrived together.

A sizeable time gap occurs between groups six and seven--from 1931 to 1946. Part of this gap is due to the interruption of postal service between the United States and Germany from 1939 until April, 1946. I have not been able to account for the time from 1931 to 1939, however.

The final groups are all post-WWII. Many of these letters are quite interesting, for they give a picture of life in Germany during the war and under the occupation. They are particularly concerned with rationing, the food shortages, the influx of refugees from the East, and the currency reform. Groups seven and eight contain letters from Hemmes' brother and sister-in-law, Jan and Paula, and his sister, Titi. The most interesting of the letters in group nine is that from Hemmes' nephew, Hans-Albert Reinkemeyer, who served as an officer in German Army Intelligence on the Eastern Front.

The second subseries (B) contains newspaper clippings and magazine articles about contemporary philosophers and subjects which interested Hemmes.

The third subseries (C) consists of exams given by Hemmes over the years. These might be of use to someone interested in the teaching of philosophy and how it has changed. The exams are divided by the subject covered. Within each folder, the exams with no date and no class number are first, followed by exams with no date but a class number, arranged by the class number, and finally, the dated exams, which are arranged chronologically. Reference to the Kalamazoo College Bulletin could put approximate dates on the exams which have a class number.

The fourth subseries (D) contains Hemmes' doctoral dissertation on Troeltsch, and the fifth consists of papers and chapel talks by Hemmes. Of these papers, the first, "Philosophy in Our Present World," was delivered for a Commencement Colloquium on June 7, 1958, and originally bore the title "The Place of Philosophy in a Liberal Arts Curriculum."

The last four subseries contain miscellany. Among them are papers by students, papers presented by others at conferences, a collection of articles on various historical topics, pictures of Hemmes teaching class, the program of his wife's commencement, and notes on various subjects. The final subseries is a collection of notebooks (study diaries, commonplace books, quotations) and notecards (in alphabetical order) on philosophers and various themes and problems of philosophy.
